Guard Rebels At Plan for Absorption Into Army

Association Head, However, Favors Law for Automatic Shift in Emergency

The National Guard Association yesterday resisted with all its force a proposal that would let the Army absorb the Guard in peacetime.

However, Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, president of the association, said he favored a law that would automatically put the Guard into the Army and Air Force in case of an emergency.

A special Defense Department advisory committee recommended Tuesday that the Guard, now under State control, be placed under Federal control.

Action Slowdown Feared

A major reason for the proposal was that in case of war technicalities might slow the Guard in going into action.

Congress first has to authorize such use of the Guard troops, and all Guard property and equipment must be formally transferred to the Federal Government by the individual States.

Walsh, in a telegram from Minnesota to the association's national headquarters yesterday, said this delay could be eliminated by amending the National Defense Act, so that the National Guard would pass instantly to the Army and Air Force in event of an emergency, without waiting for action by Congress.

He said he had even recommended the plan to the defense committee while it was studying its recommendations.

He was emphatic in his opposition to the peacetime merger, however, and he was promptly joined by other Guard and State officials.

To Fight "at Every Turn"

Walsh said the Guard will fight the plan "at every turn," adding that State control of the National Guard "is practically the last bastion in the fortress of State rights."

He predicted that the various States, aided by Congress, would join the Guard in a battle against efforts of "bureaucrats to centralize all power in Washington."

In Des Moines, Iowa, Gov. Robert D. Blue attacked the federalization plan in an address to the Iowa American Legion convention. He said it was contrary to the spirit of the Constitution.

He said the Guard is needed to preserve order in the States, and declared that "in Germany, Italy and the South American republics whenever governments have been overthrown it has been due to a union of political power with military power."

Anticipating strong opposition from States, Defense Secretary Forrestal said the recommendations of the committee were not yet defense policy and pointed out that Congress would have to act to make them law.

He said no official recommenda-

Canadian Bank In Cuba Held Up, $572,000 Taken

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 11 (AP).—Police said eight men carrying pistols and machineguns held up a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in midtown Havana this afternoon and escaped with $572,000 in cash.

The robbers, police said, arrived at the bank shortly after 3:30 p. m., led by a man dressed in a policeman's uniform.

They rounded up all employes and bank customers and locked them in a rear room of the bank.

The gang took $375,000 from the bank's main vault and $197,000 from the cashier's window.

They left the building unmolested. Not a shot was fired.

While police set the bank's loss specifically at $572,000, a spokesman for the bank said the exact amount had not been determined.

Turkeys Will Be High

Drop in Poultry, Egg Prices After Christmas Predicted; Bread, Butter May Go Down

This is the second of two articles on the food price situation by Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, and A. F. Jones, assistant to the publisher. Mr. Meyer and Mr. Jones interviewed food producers and processors and agricultural economists in Chicago and Minneapolis to learn the effect of record-breaking wheat and corn crops on food prices.

By Eugene Meyer and A. F. Jones

Minneapolis, Aug. 11.—When they look at the estimates of the 1948 wheat crop, leading authorities here in Minneapolis shake their heads in something that is closely akin to that reverential humility that actuated our forefathers on that first Thanksgiving Day.

Another tremendous wheat crop on top of the 1947 record breaker! And this on top of the splendid wheat crops that have continued through the war years and in territory that is accustomed to the too frequent years when drouth or blight or bad growing seasons have resulted in failures or partial crops!

Modern mechanization helps planting and harvesting a wheat crop, but it has nothing to do with giving it the moisture it needs at proper intervals.

The Northwest has had a deficiency of rain this summer—a deficiency of 7 inches here in Minnesota out of an average annual rainfall of 27 inches. Ordinarily that would be disastrous.

But the rains came at the right time! When the oats crop was turning brown and the wheat looked thin in June, along came a week of rain and this territory turned into a waving sea of green and healthy grain.

So beneficent has the weather been that the corn crop is two weeks ahead of usual growth and even such States as North Dakota, where a ripening crop is usually threatened by frost, now feels sure of their corn crop.

Wheat to Top Estimates

So the attitude of the men who have spent their lives in the growing and merchandising of grain and grain products is understandable. And it is shared by everyone in the Southwest, where winter wheat crops were threatened with a dust bowl drouth late last fall and where rains came at precisely the right time.

Now the best estimate of private experts is that the wheat crop will exceed the earlier estimates of the Department of Agriculture and result in a yield of 1,289,000,000 bushels, which, with last year's carry-over, will give this country more wheat in 1948 than last year.

The little band of men and women which landed at Plymouth gave thanks for the meager supply of corn, the pumpkins and other vegetables, and the turkeys and other meat supplies that insured them some degree of comfort in the winter ahead.

Today 143 million Americans are assured an abundance of every essential need through the most magnificent all-around crops in history. This country cannot only care for all its own wants, but it will be possible for us to reach out and feed hungry men, women and children in war-torn Europe, in England, in India or Japan or China.

Vital in Foreign Relations

From the standpoint of foreign relations, this wheat crop is vital. It means that in all the bread-eating countries of Europe, the United States will be able to strengthen the hands of Marshall Plan administrators by supplying wheat that will increase the European bread ration. Europe has good crops this year and will not be so dependent on the United States, but European wheat crops will not be sufficient to make it possible to go without heavy imports. Italy lives on bread and will need help. The Agriculture Department figures that the United States may export 450 million bushels from this year's crop.

Altogether, the 1948 crops should make the coming Thanksgiving a happy one not only in this country but abroad.

Here in Minneapolis, wheat is ground into flour; great elevators hold millions of bushels in storage; mills produce feeds for livestock, linseed oil from flaxseed, packaged cereals, and many other grain products. It is also the headquarters of the far-flung Land o' Lakes cooperative which markets more than 100 million dollars worth of butter, dried milk, turkeys, chickens, eggs, and cheese annually. Minnesota is the leading butter State.

No Better Center

So there is no better center in the country to check on the price situation of these vital commodities which eventually land in the housewives' shopping basket.

We have been talking about Thanksgiving, and it is an ironic fact that there are only 50 per

Overcharge Refunds Given to 155 Since January 1 by Builders

Greater Washington home builders have refunded more than $60,000 in overcharges for homes to 155 veterans since the first of the year, the Washington area office of the Office of the Housing Expediter announced yesterday.

The refunds have been made under threat of prosecution, a spokesman said. Five cases of violation in which builders have refused to make refunds have been turned over to the United States attorney's office, he said. A builder who is convicted of overcharging faces a maximum $5000 fine and/or a one-year jail sentence, he added.

Most of the refunds have been made since the OHE last month put into effect an accelerated program of investigation of violations, the spokesman said.

Under a two-million-dollar appropriation, authorized by Congress in July, 300 investigators have been added to the national staff. They have started work on a backlog of some 30,000 complaints from veterans throughout the country, he said.

Yesterday, 10 veterans in nearby Virginia received a total refund of $14,000, ranging from $500 to $2000.

The refunds included overcharges on the total price of the homes; charges for some items not actually supplied and for substitution of inferior materials. In some cases, windows and kitchen doors, indicated in the specifications, were left out. Flooring and roofing felt was eliminated and electrical fixtures were not supplied, according to the OHE report.

Chimney Falls, Hurts Man

Rain, Driven by 54-Mile Wind, Sweeps City, Floods Streets

A 54-mile-an-hour wind accompanied by more than an inch of rainfall swept over the city last evening about 6 o'clock.

Traffic was rerouted in many sections because of fallen trees and flooded streets. Police and firemen were summoned to aid residents who complained of water-filled cellars and leaking roofs.

One person was hurt when a chimney shattered the roof of his home at 1704 9th st. nw.

The injured man, identified by police as Bozzie Lathrop, 39, was sitting on his bed when the chimney from an adjacent building, reportedly struck by lightning, crashed through his ceiling. Falling plaster and lathes of the ceiling struck him on the back of his neck and cut his right leg above the knee.

Lathrop's wife, Maybelle, 22, was in the room at the time but escaped unhurt. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital for treatment and released.

A stream of water a foot deep swirled over the intersection of Bladensburg rd. and New York ave. Police routed snarled traffic around the intersection.

Traffic was clogged on Highway Bridge during the storm when a truck and two buses broke down as a result of flooded motors.

Another blockade, caused by six fallen trees in a single block, was set up at 12th and O sts. nw., police reported.

Altogether, police got reports that 20 trees and 8 tlectric wires were blown down in the District.

A tree dropped onto the front porch at 1510 Lawrence st. ne. Others were felled by wind and rain at Michigan and South Dakota aves. ne., 921 Taylor st. ne., 88 C st. sw., 201 K st. se., 7th st. and Independence ave. sw., and 4306 13th pl. ne.

A resident of Lily Ponds Homes at Kenilworth ave. and Quarles st. ne., said water was leaking through the roof and windows of many of the buildings there, soaking furniture and floors.

Tobin Says He'll Accept Labor Post

Withdraws From Governorship Race In Massachusetts To Enter Cabinet

Boston, Aug. 11 (AP).—Maurice J. Tobin, 47-year-old former Democratic Governor of Massachusetts, announced tonight he would accept the post of Secretary of Labor. He said he would not run for Governor.

Tobin, nominated by President Truman in a surprise move just before the special session of Congress adjourned Saturday night, conferred at the White House yesterday on whether to accept the post, vacant since the death of Lewis B. Schwellenbach June 10.

His decision to accept the appointment takes him out of the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor, leaving Paul A. Dever unopposed. His name, however, will remain on the September 14 ballot as the final date for withdrawal was July 30.

Tobin, a 6-foot, 180-pound son of Irish immigrant parents, is a former newsboy who entered politics in 1927 while with the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co.

After two terms in the Massachusetts House, he made his debut in Boston city politics and served on the school committee.

In 1936, after a break with James M. Curley, veteran Democratic leader in Massachusetts politics, Tobin twice defeated him for mayor of Boston—in 1937 and '41.

In November, 1944, he succeeded as Governor Republican Leverett Saltonstall, who won election to the United States Senate.

Defeated for reelection by Robert F. Bradford in the Republican landslide in 1946, Tobin has been busy preparing a political comeback for the past two years.

He is married and the father of two daughters, 14 and 13, and a son, 10.

Cutters Fighting Fire on Swedish Freighter in Bay

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Coast Guard reported tonight that a fire in the hold of the Swedish freighter S.S. Axel Salen "now seems to be under control."

The message from Coast Guard cutters standing by the freighter 12 miles out of Baltimore in Chesapeake Bay said the fire was on the starboard side amidship.

It added "the (cutter) Violet is pouring foam on it and the fire now seems under control."

But a few minutes later the Baltimore headquarters intercepted a message between the two cutters which said "the number two hold is getting hot. Paint peeling."

Another report said smoke was starting to billow out of the hold.

The Coast Guard Cutter Appalachee from here reported hatch covers had not been removed immediately from the ship's hold where chemicals were burning.

Soviet Press Optimistic Over Talks

New Times Assails Western Journals' 'No-Compromise' Views on Germany

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—The first editorial comment in the Soviet press on the East-West diplomatic meetings here appeared today. It scoffed at the idea there are no grounds for compromise between Russia and the Western Powers on Germany.

Authoritative sources predicted the representatives of the United States, Britain and France would meet soon again with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov to discuss further the Berlin situation and kindred subjects.

The time for such a conference was not determined. The informants said the Western diplomats must first coordinate the reactions of their government to proposals made by Molotov on Monday. Secrecy surrounded what ground has been covered thus far toward settling East-West differences.

The publication New Times carried the first comment on the East-West meetings. It ridiculed statements published abroad that there is "no ground for compromise between the Western powers and the Soviet Union on the German question."

New Times said this attitude had been taken by the French newspaper L'Epoch. The London Economist came in for similar criticism.

The Soviet publication said the Economist had demanded the Western powers make no compromise on control of the Ruhr, in which Russia wants a voice, and added:

"The editor of the Economist does not hide what he fears most of all on earth—that agreement on the part of the Russians will bring with it most serious inconveniences for the Western powers, for it is necessary this time for the Western powers to conduct talks on a genuine settlement of the German problem."

Marshall Emphasizes Substance of Pacts

The United States must not seek agreements with Russia merely for the sake of agreement, Secretary of State Marshall said at his news conference yesterday. He cited the Danube conference as an excellent example of what he was talking about. Story on Page 3.

Ruth Is 'Slightly Improved,' But Condition Is 'Still Critical'

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Babe Ruth, baseball's home run king, lay critically ill in a hospital today.

Sick and under constant treatment for two years, Ruth took a sudden turn for the worse from complications growing out of a cold.

The cold first was reported Monday. Yesterday his condition seemed improved with his temperature down.

But this morning, the Memorial Hospital, center for cancer and allied diseases, said Ruth's temperature had risen and added:

"There are pulmonary complications. Condition critical."

At 6 p. m. the hospital announced that Ruth was "slightly improved." However, his condition was "still critical."

The exact nature of the Bambino's illness never has been divulged. He has continued to make public appearances from time to time, but his loss of weight and rasping voice have revealed the severity of his ailment.

The Babe's wife, Claire, his adopted daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Sullivan, and a sister, Mrs. Wilbur Moberley, were at his bedside. Another adopted daughter, Mrs. Richard Flanders of North Conway, N. Hamp., was on the way here.

Ruth, now 53, underwent a delicate neck operation at French Hospital two years ago. Since then he has divided his time between hospital rooms and his Riverside Drive apartment, always under a doctor's care.

But he was able to take a Florida vacation last winter and he took part in various activities of the Babe Ruth Foundation, which aids underprivileged children.

In June he appeared with his 1923 New York Yankee teammates at the silver anniversary celebration of the Yankee Stadium, "the house that Ruth built."

The big No. 3 which he wore as a Yankee was retired by the club at this ceremony. The crowd gave the Babe a tremendous ovation, as always, and he recalled proudly in a brief talk that he hit the first home run in the stadium.

This was one of the 714 he smashed out in his major league career—the greatest slugging record in the game.

Ruth was last seen in public on July 26 when he went briefly to the premiere of the film, "The Babe Ruth Story." He was supported on both sides as he entered the theater and appeared too tired to manage more than a bare smile. He left when it was half over.

Justice Dickstein Declares He Will 'Compel' Soviet Consul to Obey

New York, Aug. 11 (NYHT). A habeas corpus writ was served on Soviet Consul Yakov M. Lomakin today ordering him to produce Mrs. Oksana Stepanovan Kosenkina in New York State Supreme Court at 10:30 a. m. Thursday.

Lomakin said he would not do it. Justice Dickstein, who issued the writ, reported: "I will compel him to obey." If necessary, Justice Dickstein said, he would order the sheriff to seize the captive school teacher, who has been held incommunicado in the consulate since Lomakin fetched her from a Rockland County retreat for anti-Communist Russians last Saturday.

The habeas corpus writ was obtained by Christopher Emmet, chairman of the board of Common Cause, Inc., who charged in his petition that Mrs. Kosenkina was being held prisoner "through power, deceit and terror."

U. S. Officials Study Move

Emmet acted without consulting the State Department. State and Justice Department officials were in consultation over the legal and political aspects of the move, but they made no comment.

In the battle of the Soviet school teachers—one held by Soviet authorities and the other, Mikhail Ivanovitch Samarin, hiding from them—Emmet's action represented a counter-offensive after Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin's effort Monday to gain custody of Samarin. Panyushkin presented a formal demand to the State Department, which was not accepted.

The State Department said it would make no further statement on the Soviet consul's legal immunities and privileges unless officially asked to do so. Justice Dickstein said he saw no need of consulting the State Department. He was confident that any immunity enjoyed by Lomakin extended only to himself and his staff, not to Mrs. Kosenkina.

Dickstein Determined

"She has as much right to the protection of the law as he has to his immunity," Justice Dickstein said. "She is a Russian subject in his custody whom I understand he has kidnaped to take her back to Russia, where she claims she will be killed."

"For the good of himself and his government he had better produce her. A writ must be obeyed. Whatever objection he has let him state it in court. I am not going to let him ignore the law."

Previously the State Department had ruled that Lomakin could be served with legal papers outside his consulate, but the consulate could not be entered unless there was "reason to believe a crime is being committed."

Service of Writ Described

Accordingly service of the writ was made on the steps outside the consulate at 7 E. 61st st. Peter W. Hoguet, attorney for Common Cause, Inc., and Hugh J. Donohue, New York State commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, took their writ to the Hotel Pierre, across the street from the consulate, to discuss the best means of serving it. At about 5 o'clock Hoguet walked out into the street to see if two policemen on the scene could help. Just then he noticed Lomakin walking up the consulate steps, surrounded by a group of newspapermen. He was

All Eastmark Funds Frozen In West Berlin

U. S., Britain, France Strike at Russians In Currency War

Berlin, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Western powers took the offensive in the East-West economic war in Berlin tonight, freezing all Eastmark (Russian-sponsored) accounts in western banks.

An official statement said the action was necessary because the Russian-created Deutsche Noten Bank had refused to release accounts of firms in Western Berlin unless they promised to do business only in Eastmarks.

Many western sector firms had been unable to meet their payrolls as a result of the Soviet action and the western military governments had been forced to assist these firms by arranging credits for them.

Deny Phone Service Stopped

The Soviet-sponsored news agency ADN said tonight the American Military Government had interrupted three telephone lines between Berlin and the Russian zone. American officials immediately denied they had done so.

The central Berlin telephone exchange is in the American sector. Early last month the Russians were reported to have begun rerouting their lines so they would by-pass the American sector.

American officials have predicted that when the Russians finished the job they could be expected to cut the lines between western Berlin and western Germany.

On the airlift front, an American pilot reported Russian anti-aircraft shells exploded in sight of his plane last night in the American air corridor over the Soviet zone. American officials said the Russians were holding target practice and that this was the fifth incident of the kind in recent months.

Other developments during the day included:

1. An announcement by United States transport officials that a fleet of coal trains has been marshaled close to the border of the Soviet zone to speed to Berlin if the four-power talks in Moscow result in the lifting of the Soviet blockade.

2. United States Secretary of Air W. Stuart Symington said the airlift supplying Berlin could be op-

Miss Bentley Says FBI Agents Say Story Stands Up Under Scrutiny

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, confessed Soviet spy, testified yesterday that she had been told by "several agents" of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that they have never found a major discrepancy in any of the facts she has told them.

The FBI has not made any statement and probably will not be called upon to do so as long as cases are pending before the New York grand jury which is investigating espionage charges.

Throughout two years of inquiry, the FBI has checked and counterchecked the Bentley story and there have been unofficial reports that they have confirmed her testimony as to every aspect in which a direct check was possible.

Meanwhile, there were these other developments:

1. The House Committee on Un-American Activities, before which Miss Bentley testified, announced that a subcommittee will go to Ottawa or vicinity to obtain a statement from Igor Gouzenko, former Russian Embassy clerk who was responsible for breaking the Canadian atom bomb spy case.

2. Another subcommittee will go to New York today, the committee announced, to take testimony from Michael Ivanovitch Samarin and his wife. Samarin is the New York teacher who fled from the Russian secret police and gave himself up to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

3. Henry Hill Collins, jr., 43-year-old former military government officer, charged by Whittaker Chambers, a senior editor of Time Magazine, as a member of an "elite" group of Communists being groomed for important posts in this Government, refused to say whether or not he was a member of the Communist Party on the ground that an answer might incriminate him. He denied that he had ever engaged in espionage or been an agent for a foreign power. Collins declined to say whether he knew a man called "Carl," the name Chambers testified he used during the years from 1924 to 1937 when he was active in the Communist Party.

He testified, "I do not remember ever having met any man named Whittaker Chambers." He refused, again on the ground that an answer might incriminate him, to say whether or not he knew Alger Hiss, former policy-making State Department official, or whether Hiss had ever been in his home.

4. Miss Bentley again linked the Russian government and its Washington embassy to the Washington espionage ring in testimony that Anatol Gromov, formerly a first secretary of the Russian embassy, handed her $2000 in $20 bills on a New York street corner in 1945 while FBI agents trailed her. The money, she said, was the first Soviet payment for her work she had ever received, and she accepted that only under FBI instructions.

5. Miss Bentley also swore under oath that allegations made against her character by a number of witnesses "are false without any shadow of a doubt." She told the committee that any person who has left the Communist Party and tried to expose it has been subject to a campaign of slander in order to discredit his testimony.

She said she had worked for a year and a half with the FBI in trying to expose the alleged Communist conspiracy in government circles.

6. Witnesses announced for today in committee hearings in Washington will be George Silverman, formerly with the Railroad Retirement Board, now a civilian in the Air Corps, and Charles Kramer, former employe of a sub-

So Long As They Obey Laws

Marshall Promises Protection To Russians Who Stay in U. S.

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Soviet citizens who wish to remain in the United States in defiance of their government will be protected, Secretary of State Marshall said yesterday, so long as they comply with this country's laws.

His statement, at his news conference, was in answer to a question on a Russian demand that Mikhail Samarin, a Russian citizen, be turned over to Soviet authorities. Samarin, who has been subpenaed by the House Un-American Activities Committee, is at present in hiding with his family.

The whole question, Marshall said, was complicated by differences between Soviet laws and those of the United States. But in this country, he declared, United States laws govern and any individual who obeys them will be protected.

While Marshall did not specify that his statement applied to any particular individual, a formal demand that Samarin be turned over to them has been made by Soviet authorities. A teacher brought to the United States to instruct children of Soviet officials here, Samarin disappeared shortly before he was to have been returned to Russia. The Soviet contention was that he had been kidnaped.

Last week Soviet Ambassador Alexander Panyushkin appeared at the State Department and demanded that Samarin be handed over promptly to the embassy. Previously Samarin had gone to the FBI in New York and volunteered information in connection with the espionage inquiry now under way by the House committee.

Marshall said yesterday, in answer to questions from reporters, that Panyushkin's protest and demand were based on incorrect information.

Samarin's own statement published in the New York Times,

Gouzenko Believes Bomb Data Known

(This is the story of the former Russian cipher expert who exposed Stalin's spy ring in Canada in September, 1945. It compares closely with the story being told currently before congressional investigators. —Editor's note.)

By Igor Gouzenko

Installment V

Tactical Intelligence occupied a house on Chernishev Street. Its aim was to obtain information directly at the front and in the immediate rear of the enemy. A friend working there told me its officers spoke of training for "the peacetime future."

"Do you think you are working for the duration of the war only?" the department chief had asked some young technicians in reply to a query. "Your future promises to be even brighter in an exciting peacetime program."

The words, "peacetime program," suggested propaganda. That must be it, I concluded.

Within Strategic Intelligence, a branch called "Special Communications" was established, into which all of us with knowledge of languages were drawn. This branch now handled telegrams from Intelligence groups at foreign points.

The Information Branch became the largest of all Intelligence Administration branches. Headed by Major General Khlopov, it employed hundreds of specialists working on material from abroad received through agents or other sources. It was divided into "countries" with each such division having political and economic subsections. Information of a technical and scientific nature was passed on to the General Branch.

Particularly keen, as I frequently had it proven to me, were the astonishing array of experts at Chief Intelligence Headquarters, who came from every kind of technical and scientific institution. Arrivals of drawings, formulae and the like always caused excitement in the ranks of the experts, and were usually reflected in the flood of queries and replies we had to handle when new dribs and drabs of information were needed to fill in blank spots.

Officials Drop Secrets Abroad

The persistence and patience of the experts seldom failed to get the wanted information, and that is a point which should be borne in mind by nations who believe their secrets are burglar-proof.

Often we would send out the same telegram to 20 or more addresses in various parts of the world. One "urgent" query of this nature asked for an item of information about some alleged scientific innovation in the United States. It was by nature highly technical, which prevents me from recalling it now, but I do remember the excitement aroused in our cipher section by the results. Neither of two agents in the United States could enlighten the experts, but complete and identical information on the American development was received from agents in Canada and England!

Often, very often, a distinguished personage traveling in another Allied country, or a talkative embassy worker abroad, would drop secrets kept under closest censorship in their own countries. That is why the "mass production" espionage system of the Soviet Intelligence seldom fails to pay off when something is wanted urgently.

Thinks Reds Know Atom Secret

For that reason, I doubt very much that any aspect of atomic bomb production or behavior is unknown to the Soviet at present. If there are any blank spots, it is certain that dogged digging is now proceeding, not only in the United States, but in all other nations which might have a drib or drab of helpful data.

As for the employes selected for information branch operations by Soviet intelligence, it is decidedly dangerous to follow the seemingly popular practice of underestimating their efficiency.

The most exacting qualifications were demanded for their acceptance. They had to know a foreign language well and the Russian language perfectly. This applies particularly to officers engaged in political and economic fields, because they have to write voluminous reports which later pass on for examination by the government and in many cases by Stalin personally.

Bulletins of a general nature and covering a limitless variety of questions were issued regularly and sent to Stalin and to the chief of the general staff of the Red army —then Vasilevsky and later Antonov.

Top Secrets to Stalin

Information of particular importance—for the most part documentary information—was handed over in unedited and unabbreviated form to Molotov, Malenkov or Stalin. Usually such top secret information was taken to the Kremlin personally by the chief of headquarters.

Sometimes information of a politico-economic character was passed on to the Academy of Science or to the Institute of World Politics and Economy. From this type of data the academy and institute frequently published reports or pamphlets dealing with conditions in various countries. Depending on their nature, such reports or pamphlets had either "strictly confidential" circulation in highest Communist Party and government circles or were issued for public consumption.

In dealing with these two types of releases Soviet ingenuity was strongly manifest.

The releases for public consumption were frequently distorted, elaborated or totally altered before appearing in such journals as World Economics and Politics, The Bolshevik, and others. Furthermore, references to foreign "official sources" and the foreign press were sprinkled liberally through the revamped releases to offset any suspicion by the reader that the material had been obtained from Soviet agents abroad.

Officials Told Straight Facts

Many critics in democratic countries have seized on this type of jazzed-up and perverted article to prove their contention that such tactics were awkward and obvious. Often I have heard it said that as long as the Soviet goes in for such clumsy propaganda production, the people outside of the Soviet are quite safe from pollution.

But the same critics have no way of seeing the "strictly confidential" releases. I have handled many of them, and was generally impressed by the thoroughness and exacting manner of their presentation. There was nothing awkward or obvious. Facts and precise details keynoted such releases.

On some occasions I read the same release as it was sent to the bigwigs, and in "public consumption" form. Utter disregard for truth and statements twisted for the benefit of current propaganda themes characterized what the public read, but there was no such harmful nonsense in the official version.

House Group Plans to Get Statement From Gouzenko

committee headed by Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), Miss Bentley testified that Silverman was a Communist from whom she collected dues and who furnished "quite prolific information" to her during the war. Kramer, she testified, was a Communist of long standing.

7. Witnesses announced for Friday will be Harry Dexter White, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who was identified by both Miss Bentley and Chambers as a Communist, and Lauchlin Currie, former administrative assistant to the late President Roosevelt. Miss Bentley said Currie was a source of information to her espionage ring but that he was not, so far as she knew, a member of the Communist Party.

8. Other witnesses called for the same day will be V. Frank Coe, $14,000 secretary of the International Monetary Fund, onetime Treasury employe; Donald Hiss, Washington attorney and former State Department employe, identified by Chambers as a member of an early Communist "apparatus" here, and Prof. Bela Gold of Pittsburgh. Hiss already has denied the accusations. Miss Bentley said that a William Gold and his wife, Sonia, were members of the Communist Party. Prof. Bela Gold requested to appear to answer her charges.

Miss Bentley's testimony in support of the acuracy of her previous testimony came toward the end of her evidence yesterday.

When J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the committee, asked her "Do you have anything further to say?" She said:

"Just one thing I did want to bring up, Mr. Chairman, and that is the question of these personal allegations that have been brought up against me by various witnesses before this Committee.

"I would like to make it completely clear that these allegations are false without any shadow of a doubt. I would also like to call the attention of the Committee to the fact that any person who has left the Communist movement and has tried to expose it, has been subject to a campaign of slander, which has, as its object, the discrediting of that witness' testimony.

"I feel that I worked for a year and a half with the FBI on this story. From what they told me, there was no piece of evidence I gave them which they checked and found wrong."

Later, in answer to a question by Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), she said: "I have been told by several agents in the Bureau that they have never found a major discrepancy in any of the facts which I have told them, and which they have, of course, had a great opportunity to check."

Canadian Case Recalled

The full details of Miss Bentley's story about the $2000 payment and award of Russia's Red Star medal for her spy work suggested a striking similarity to the pattern of espionage in Canada as revealed in 1946 by a Royal Canadian Commission. The testimony brought the immediate committee decision to send one of its members to Ottawa to run down possible fresh leads. Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) was assigned to the Canadian check.

The Associated Press reported from Ottawa yesterday that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police there say that no notice has been yet received that the Un-American Activities Committee wants to interview Igor Gouzenko.

Last week, the Associated Press said, Commissioner S. T. Wood declared that committee representatives would not be allowed to see Gouzenko, closely guarded by the Mounties since he made his disclosure. However, Wood was not in Ottawa last night to comment on the official announcement by the committee.

A Canadian government spokesman said he doubted Gouzenko's usefulness in the committee inquiry. He pointed out that everything Gouzenko knows about espionage nets in North America has been told already in the Canadian report on this country's spy inquiry and the resulting trials.

Knew Gromov As "Al"

Miss Bentley told the committee yesterday she first met Gromov at a drug store at the corner of Wisconsin ave. and N street in Georgetown in the latter part of October, 1944. He was known to her then and for a long time afterward, she said, only as "Al."

The meetings, she said, had been arranged between "Al" and herself by another Russian contact under whom she had been working named "Jack."

"He (Jack) had made arrangements that I would carry a copy of Time magazine, wear a hat with a red rose on it, as I recall, and Al would come up to me and say, 'Aren't you the Mary I knew in such and such a place?' and I would say 'Yes.'"

She met Al three or four times in Washington, she said, with a secret purpose in her mind that she was going to get out of this espionage ring and see if she could get others out, too.

Tried to Pay Her

As early as January and February, 1944, she said, her Russian contacts had been trying to pay her off and asking her to take a salary as a member of the organization.

"I had refused, and then they temporarily sidetracked onto trying to give me a fur coat and an air-conditioning machine, and then, with hte advent of Al, had tried, as I suppose, to bribe me with the Red Star.

A few months after the award to her of the Red Star—which was shown but never handed over to her, Miss Bentley said, she went to the FBI in New Haven, Conn., on or about August 21 or 22, 1945, and made a full disclosure of all her activities.

The FBI instructed her, she said, to continue with her activities so they could track down her contacts.

FBI Agents Followed Her

On October 17, 1945, she said, she had another meeting with "Al," with two FBI agents following her at some distance. They met, she said, at the corner of 23d st. and 8th ave., in New York, near the Bickford's cafeteria.

Her testimony on this was:

"But a few months after the Red Star, Al again had started asking me to the effect that I must be traitor, that there was something wrong with me, because I would not accept my salary, and he told me that this salary, altough I refused it, was piling up in Moscow on my behalf.

"At the time I received the money, he had been fairly persistent in the last few meetings, and at this meeting, I met him on the corner of 23d st. and 8th ave., near that Bickford's Cafeteria there, and he immediately took me on a long trek toward the docks in a very deserted region of New York.

"The day previously I had spoken to the FBI agent I was in contact with, had informed him I was meeting this Russian agent, and had asked for instructions.

"He said 'Keep in contact with him; don't let him know that you are suspicious, and do anything which is necessary to keep in touch with us so that we can continue with the job we are doing.' Neither he nor I knew that Al would turn up with $2000.'

She and "Al" walked along New York's waterfront, she testified.

"I was quite upset, because I assumed, and I am quite sure I am correct, that I did have some of the FBI agents behind to protect me, but nevertheless it was deserted, and I was terribly upset by being alone with him there.

"He kept pressing me and told me that unless I accepted the money that he had in his pocket that he would consider me a traitor, and I knew what that meant.

Gave Receipt for Money

"Finally, I got him away from the dock region, as far as 10th st. and 4th st., and he gave me the money. I gave him a receipt for it."

She then described the receipt.

The money, she said, had come in a size 10 envelope, "and I tore off one corner of it, wrote the date, 'Received $2000,' and signed it "Mary."

She had every reason to believe, she said, the FBI observed the transaction.

"After I received the $2000, I put it in the safe at my office, and then turned it over to the FBI."

Because the cases against all mentioned by Miss Bentley are still before a grand jury in New York, which is only in recess, the FBI made no comment, but the money was said to be still in the possession of the FBI.

Money Given to Agents

She said she turned the $2000 over to two agents who transferred it into a separate envelope, and countersigned their names on it.

Later Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) asked Miss Bentley if she could, if necessary, name the agents to whom she handed the money.

"In view of the fact that some of the witnesses have endeavored to cast doubt upon the credibility of Miss Bentley's testimony, I think it is tremendously important to recognize that we now have something tangible in which everybody concerned can set his teeth. Two thousand dollars is a tangible sum of money. It either has been handed by Miss Bentley to the FBI or it has not. That is a matter of record."

Miss Bentley said she would be able to name the two agents and added that the FBI certainly would confirm her story.

Later she met Gromov (Al) again, she said, on November 20, 1945, near the same Bickford's Cafeteria.

"Were FBI agents present at that time?" queried Chief Investigator Robert E. Stripling.

"Yes, I observed some of them," she replied.

"Was Al aware that he was under surveillance?"

"I do not believe so," she replied, "because it has been the policy of Russian agents never to meet anyone when they believe that that person is under surveillance."

Apparently Gromov became suspicious shortly thereafter, because he never again met her, according to Miss Bentley's testimony.

"I had an appointment with him at about January 20 of the following year (1946)," she said, "and he never appeared."

She said Anatol Gromov was successively second secretary and first secretary of the Russian Embassy.

Early in the hearings, the committee took occasion to call public attention to broadcast reports that the New Haven office of the FBI had said Miss Bentley never came near them. These reports the committee categorically denied, saying the visits had been confirmed.

The award of the Red Star, Miss Bentley said, was first made known to her in November, 1944. She met Gromov, she declared, in New York on Broadway in front of a movie theater around 103d st. She had been previously told by "Jack" that Al had some good news for her.

"He wants to see you and tell you personally," she quoted "Jack." "He said, 'You will be very thrilled by it, and I do not want to spoil his surprise.'" said Miss Bentley.

She and Gromov, she said, started walking toward Riverside dr. and he made her a long speech.

Decoration Is Shown Her

It was, she said "to the effect that the Supreme Presidium of the USSR on November 7 had awarded me the Order of the Red Star. This was in regard for my extremely valuable services to the Soviet Union." At that time he told her the decoration itself had not yet been sent from Russia, but he showed her a colored picture of the Red Star, torn out of some American magazine.

"Did he show you any other notice or registry regarding the award?" she was asked.

"Not at that time, but I would say roughly two months later, he turned up with the Red Star in a little box, and showed it to me, let me look at it, and at the same time showed me a little book—I guess it was about this size (indicating) which had my name inside in Russian, and opposite in Russian the Order of the Red Star and the date."

Miss Bentley's dramatic step by step detailing of the contacts she made with the Russian First Secretary, who left the United States on February 22, 1946, just about three months after her last meeting with him was observed by FBI agents, overtopped all other developments.

Picture Filling In

Little by little in a round-about fashion the committee is also beginning to fill in the gaps in the picture about the Communist "apparatus" described by Whittaker Chambers.

Henry H. Collins, jr., who was represented by Harry C. Lamberton of Washington as counsel, opened his testimony by telling the committee he was the executive director (a paid post) of the American Russian Institute, an organization named by Attorney General Tom C. Clark as subversive. It was Collins' apartment, Chambers testified, that was the meeting place of the "elite" group of Communists devoted to working their way into positions of Government influence. Saying that he might incriminate himself, he refused to say if he had met any of the men named by Chambers in his apartment.

In order, he refused to state whether or not these men had met there:

John Abt, Alger Hiss, Lee Pressman, "an individual then known as Carl," Charles Kramer, Donald Hiss, J. V. Peters, alias Alexander Stevens and alias Isadore Boorstein, and Victor Perlo.

He also refused to say if he had ever been in the home of Alger Hiss on the grounds it might tend to incriminate him. Hiss, on the other hand, had freely testified he knew Collins very well, had been to his house, and was a boyhood friend of his.

Maritime Lets Contracts for Two Big Liners

By The Associated Press

The largest contract ever let by the Maritime Commission called today for construction of two passenger vessels costing about 25 million dollars each for American Export Lines, Inc.

The ships, 683 feet long with a top speed of about 25 knots, will be the second largest merchant ships to be built in this country and the first passenger ships constructed here since the war.

The contractor is the Bethlehem Steel Corp., Quincy, Mass. The ships are scheduled for service in the Mediterranean trade.

A commission announcement said the award marks the first agreement by the shipping industry to participate in the merchant shipbuilding program jointly with the commission and national defense officials following Congress authorization of 94 million dollars in contracts.

Marshall said, showed he was not being held against his will as Panyushkin maintained.

In tthe face of wide and confused publicity about the case, Marshall said, the State Department was endeavoring to gather details so an early reply could be made to the Soviet Ambassador.

Marshall emphasized, however, that this Government would countenance no action which interfered with the diplomatic immunity of Soviet officials and certain Soviet premises in this country. Though he did not amplify this remark, it was taken to mean the Soviet consulate in New York should not be interfered with in the performance of its duties.

4 Nuernberg Sentences Are Modified

Nuernberg, Germany, Aug. 11 (AP).—For the first time in the Nuernberg war crimes trials, a United States court reconsidered its judgment today. It modified sentences imposed on four former SS (Elite Guard) men.

The tribunal was recalled from the United States a month ago on orders of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States commander in Germany, who was dissatisfied with the record in the case against Oswald Pohl, former head of Heinrich Himmler's concentration camp system, and 17 of his subordinates.

The tribunal announced these changes in its sentences:

George Loerner, deputy to Pohl, life imprisonment instead of death by hanging; Max Kiefer, branch chief in the SS business organization, 20 years instead of life; Heinz Karl Fanslay, SS general, 20 years instead of life, and Hans Bobermin, SS colonel, 15 years instead of 20.

The court confirmed the death sentences imposed last November on Pohl, Franz Eirenschmals and Karl Sommer.

telling them he knew nothing of the writ.

Hoguet joined the group, identified himself, and offered the writ to Lomakin. The consul put his hands behind his back, and said, "No, I don't want it." Some one said "You'd better take it." Hoguet pressed the papers on Lomakin's chest, and he finally grasped them and walked inside through the big glass doors.

For nearly an hour after that nothing happened. Consular officials reached by telephone said they knew nothing of the writ, or there was no writ, or they had no comment. Finally Lomakin sent word through his secretary that he would not produce Mrs. Kosenkina in court, and that as far as he was concerned "the writ was never served."

Picture of Incident

"That's all right; we have eight or ten witnesses, and a picture," Hoguet commented.

Hoguet, a former law assistant to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey when the latter was district attorney, is chairman of the Citizens Committee to Defeat Vito Marcantonio and an eager partisan of anti-Communist causes. Common Cause, Inc., the organization sponsoring the habeas corpus procedure, is an active anti-Communist organization which devotes its efforts among other things to helping Russian displaced persons being sent back to Russia.

This work brought Emmet, chairman of Common Cause, in contact with Countess Tolstoy, president of Tolstoy Foundation, Inc., which gave Mrs. Kosenkina asylum when she said she did not want to go to Russia.

"We are interested in giving the woman a chance to get free if she wants to," Emmet said. "I'm convinced the woman was sincerely terrified and wanted to get away from Russia, and I am sure she went back to the consulate only under some duress. Until she is produced in court our suspicion that she is acting under duress remains."

Directors of Organization

Among the directors of Common Cause, Inc., are Mrs. Natalie Wales Paine, Adolf A. Berle, jr., William Henry Chamberlin, Arthur Bliss Lane, Dorothy Thompson, Clare Boothe Luce and Wilbur Forrest.

In his petition for the writ Emmet alleged that:

"The cause or pretense of the imprisonment or restraint, according to the information and belief of your petitioner, is the desire of the defendant (the consul general) to transport the prisoner to slavery and death in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and to prevent her from telling the people of the United States of conditions in said Union and the methods of government thereof."

He said her imprisonment "is wholly without warrant of law and is exercised, according to the information and belief of your petitioner, through power, deceit and terror exercised by the defendant upon the prisoner."

Shanghai Now 4th City, Population 6 Million

Shanghai, Aug. 11 (AP).—The population of Shanghai today was placed above the six-million mark by the police census bureau.

A great influx of war refugees from the north has swelled the total, which was 4,274,000 in 1940.

The new figure puts the Chinese city in the first four of the world, topped by New York, London and Paris.

Marshall Stresses U. S. Danube Stake

Premier Is Target

Finns Hit In Moscow Publication

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Literary Gazette today assailed the Finnish government as being made up of the "people of 1939" who led Finland into war against Russia.

In the strongest attack to appear in the Soviet press since Premier Karl August Fagerholm formed his Social Democrat cabinet last month, the Gazette implied Fagerholm was likely to push the nation into the Anglo-American camp.".

(The Soviet Union and Finland signed a treaty of friendship and mutual aid in April. In the July parliamentary elections the Communist-dominated Popular Democratic Union, strongest advocates of the treaty, lost almost one-fourth of the 51 seats they had won in 1945. Premier Mauno Pekkala resigned July 23 and Fagerholm succeeded him a week later.)

At the same time, the periodical New Times accused former President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia of trying to "hold back the Czechoslovak people from active battle with the German Fascist oppressor." It was the first attack on Benes in the Soviet press in recent years.

New Danube Rebuff to U. S.

By Homer Bigart

Belgrade, Aug. 11 (NYHT).—Another American amendment to the Soviet draft of a convention for the control of Danube River navigation was rejected today by the familiar vote of 7 to 3, as the general committee of the Russian-dominated Danubian Conference approved Article 1 as written by Andrei Y. Vishinsky, chief of the Soviet delegation.

The Soviet article was approved by a vote of 7 to 1, with France the sole dissenter. The United States and Britain abstained. They could hardly do otherwise, for the Soviet wording was identical with the formula approved two years ago by the Council of Foreign Ministers.

The difference between the American and Soviet articles was the former's emphasis on "entire equality without discrimination" for all shipping on the Danube. The Soviet version merely pledges "equalty in regard to port and navigation charges and conditions for merchant shipping."

Tonight, a British proposal that the new convention apply not only to the Danube, but also to its navigable tributaries and adjacent canals, was similarly defeated, 7 to 2, with France not voting.

After the British defeat, British Ambassador Sir Charles Peake announced that continued British participation in this conference was not to be regarded as prejudicial to the rights enjoyed by Britain under the 1921 Convention.

The United States must not seek agreements with Russia merely for agreement's sake, Secretary of State Marshall said yesterday.

In thus reiterating a position he took 16 months ago after the abortive Moscow conference, Marshall was speaking directly about the current Belgrade meeting on Danube navigation. He declined to say whether his statement applied equally to other questions at issue between this country and Russia, but the breadth of the statement itself left little doubt that its principle did apply there, also.

Asked by a reporter at his news conference if he could reveal any details of talks now in progress in Moscow on the German situation, Marshall maintained the secrecy that has obtained so far on that subject. For him to discuss details of the Moscow meeting, he said, would be a breach of faith.

The Secretary of State also kept his own counsel on progress of negotiations between the United States and nations of western Europe on American military support. These talks, now going on here, have been held under an agreement of secrecy.

Marshall was led to speak at length on the Danubian conference by a question as to whether the Western powers should continue negotiations at Belgrade in view of the Russian attitude.

Marshall then said the Danube conference was an excellent example of the difficulties the United States has encountered in all its efforts to reach agreements directed at assuring the stability and peace of Europe. This Government, he explained, felt that it should not be assumed that agreement by negotiation was impossible and that efforts to negotiate agreements should be continued.

It was then that he said it was perfectly clear the United States should not seek agreement merely for agreement's sake. There were, he said, certain fundamentals to which this Government attached great importance and which it was unwilling to sacrifice.

Turning to the question of the Danube, Marshall said the Soviet proposal on control was designed to tie up navigation to the disadvantage of other European countries and at their expense.

The United States, he said, could not agree to a system that could be used to obstruct free commerce on the river. This Government, he continued, has a particular interest in protecting the rights of Germany and in keeping the Danube open as a great artery of trade serving almost all countries of central and eastern Europe.

Upon the opening of the Belgrade conference, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky advanced proposals for control of the river that would have shut out all but Soviet Russia and its satellites. Controlling a voting power of 7 to 3, Vishinsky then told the Western powers they could accept his proposal or get out.

The United States now is endeavoring to amend the Soviet proposal section by section.

Marshall made it clear at his conference yesterday that this Government, with a legitimate interest in the Danube, would not agree to the Soviet system of control. But he did not say what further steps could be taken in view of the Russian attitude.

3. A new report of food shortages in the Soviet occupation zone.

Symington arrived in Berlin with Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, and Lieut. Gen. Curtis Le Mey, commander of American flying forces in Europe.

The new report of food shortages in the Russian zone came in a Soviet-licensed newspaper, Neue Zeit. An article signed by A. Miller, member of the state parliament of Saxony-Anhalt, in the Russian zone, said:

"We have bitter need for improvement of our food ration because our physical reserves have long since been spent. As a result, illness lasts longer and our abilities to produce are reduced.

"Nevertheless, our production must not only be maintained but more is demanded of us."

Berliners at a rally in the United States sector cheered demands that no compromise be made in Moscow which would hand control of the city to the Communists.

4-Year Plan Set for ECA

Paris, Aug. 11 (NYHT).—The Organization for European Economic Cooperation, representing the 16 European nations which will participate in aid under the Marshall Plan, expects to have a four-year master plan ready for American consideration by mid-November.

Such a program would carry to 1952, at which time the Marshall Plan envisages a self-sufficient Europe.

Dag Hammarskjold, Swedish delegate to the OEEC and member of the executive committee, said questionnaires are being sent this week to the various nations, asking for details on their national plans for utilization of Marshall Plan aid and for statistics bearing out whatever contentions they may make. Replies should be complete by the end of September, Hammarskjold said, and the necessary adjustments should be ready in time to submit the plan to the Economic Cooperation Administration by the middle of November.

Hammarskjold said the only target of the plan would be "European viability," and that precision in ultimate goals would be sacrificed to adjustability during the years of change that are certain to come between 1948 and 1952.

U. S. Agent Planning European Rail System

Paris, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Charles S. Dewey, agent general for a joint congressional committee watching over Marshall Plan funds, said today he is negotiating to set up a western European international railway system.

Dewey said such a railroad might be financed by the Marshall Plan and run from Denmark to the heel of Italy.

'B' Is for Back, 'Y' for Yard, 'S' for School

"PLAY SCHOOL" PROJECT—Walda Moorman, teacher, assisted by Maureen Dorsey, opens the summer school class in the back yard of her home, 5916 Southwick st., Bethesda, Md. Around the table are (from left) Nonie Turville, John Anthony Dorsey, Billy Dorsey, Gladys Shantz, Mike Dorsey, Walda, Maureen, Jane Sandusky, Tommy and Bobby Whitelock, Shawn Dorsey

Two Bethesda girls, not yet teen-agers, are majoring in education this summer in their own backyard.

As a result, about 12 tots, not to mention grateful mothers, are benefiting from a backyard "play school" conducted by the two youthful schoolmarms.

It all began with the tenth birthday of Walda Moorman, 5619 Southwick st. She was given a supply of pencils, paste, crayons and paper.

Because her playmate, Maureen Dorsey, 11, of 5620 Green Tree rd., was away when school closed in June, Walda became lonesome. So she decided to start a "school" of her own, with her pencils, paste, crayons and paper, and bring in other neighborhood children.

Nieghborhood mothers approved and in short order the "school" bell was ringing in Walda's back yard. When Maureen returned, she, too became a "teacher."

Walda's mother, Mrs. Walter H. Moorman, is a former teacher at Bradley Elementary School. Bethesda, said, "I've let them run the whole show."

"The most amazing thing," she added, "is how they mapped out their own ambitious program and have stuck to it all summer."

Daily classroom sessions at a picnic table consists of drawing lessons and singing. One favorite song is "I'm a lonely little Petunia in an onion patch."

When the pupils become restive, youthful "teachers" call a recess which consists of baseball, basketball, badminton and swinging. Picnics and short walks are part of the "curriculum." The under-teen-age teachers also keep a close watch on their pupils' manners.

Both Walda's and Maureen's fathers are attorneys.

Maureen's mother, Mrs. John H. Dorsey, has entered four other children in the "school": John A., 9; Michael, 8; Billy, 6, and Shawn, 3. Mrs. Dorsey thinks the school is "wonderful." Three-year-old Shawn sort of tags along, but for company he has Nonie Turville, 2½, of 5622 Green Tree rd. Both are tolerated by the older pupils, even though they are often in the way.

Other kids attending yesterday's session were the 6-year-old twins, Bobby and Tommy Whitelock, 5617 Green Tree rd.; Gladys Shantz, 8, of 5620 Southwick st., and June Sandusky, 6, of 5618 Southwick st.

Premier Hails Alevitsa's Capture

Athens, Aug. 11 (AP).—Premier Themistokles Sophoulis tonight hailed the capture of heavily fortified Alevitsa as a key gain in the government drive to crush Communist-led guerillas in northwest Greece.

The general staff said capture of the 5000-foot peak which was stubbornly defended by the rebels opened the way for a final assault on the last major guerilla supply route from Albania.

Press reports said the army mounted a fresh attack on the massive 5500-foot peak of Pyrgos and also were fighting at Paliostrounga and Groussia. These report indicated the army was advancing along the entire perimeter.

'Duck' Sighted Far Out at Sea On Globe Trip

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—An Australian major and his American wife were reported several hundred miles at sea tonight in a converted amphibian "duck" they hope will take them around the world by land and water.

The daring voyage that began here without fanfare last Saturday was disclosed today by an associate of the Australian, after a Navy destroyer was said to have sighted the strange 17-foot craft. Ducks were used during the war to shuttle men and supplies from ship to shore and other purposes.

The destroyer reportedly saw "two women" in the amphibious duck about 150 miles off New York at 6:10 p. m. Monday. Its occupants hailed the ship and asked that "Lynch," at a New York telephone number, be notified that they were "okay."

Today Ware Lynch, president of a public relations agency, disclosed he had received a message from the Navy's Eastern Sea Frontier.

The "two women," he said, were Maj. Benjamin F. Carlin, 35, and his wife, the former Elinore Arone, 29, of Boston.

"He has a radio but he's never been able to contact us," said Lynch. "The Navy report is the last we've heard. They're in the hands of the gods now."

Lynch told this story of the Australian's attempt to do "what everybody tells him he's crazy to try":

A mining engineer from Perth, Australia, Carlin was serving in China when he got the idea of making one of the small land-and-water vehicles into a sea-going craft.

While he had been serving in India, he had met the Boston girl, who was a Red Cross nurse. When he came to this country to perfect his plan, she agreed to make the voyage with him. With Army pay he had saved up, Carlin bought the truck from the Army for $901. At Arlington, Va., he spent many hours and $9000 of his savings to convert it.

He placed a transparent plastic hood over the top of the truck of an iron frame, and installed a bigger propeller. A 500-gallon tank was installed under the truck—to go on top when it rode on land.

The whole body was coated with rubberized paint. The tiny "cabin" was equipped with radio and a jumble of other equipment, with a 4½-foot bench where only one could sleep at a time.

On June 17, two weeks after their marriage, the Carlins made their first try at the honeymoon voyage. They had got 200 miles off shore when rudder trouble developed and they turned back.

Later, still without seeking public attention, they started off again. This time they were 80 miles out when the exhaust pipe began to leak. Again they returned to shore.

At about noon last Saturday, they quietly put out to sea again, with the Azores 18 days and 2300 miles ahead of them.

Carlin plans to travel 25,771 miles by water and land around the world, and expects the trip to take six months. His truck travels 4½ miles an hour on the water, and from 20 to 30 miles an hour on land.

His route is from the Azores to the north coast of Africa, then through the Near East to Rangoon, where he will pick up some back pay the Indian army owes him.

From the Malay Peninsula he will go by Wake, Midway and other islands to Honolulu. Then he will make his biggest water hop—more than 2300 miles to San Francisco.

As an afterthought, Carlin got himself a job during the trip—as an inspector general for SAFE (save a friend in Europe), which wants a survey made of food parcel distribution abroad.

He carries a load of SAFE parcels, part of their food supply for the trip.

Soviet Demands MacArthur Cancel No-Strike Ban Against Japan's Government Workers

Tokyo, Aug. 11 (AP).—Russia jumped into Japan's explosive labor crisis today with a demand that General MacArthur cancel the no-strike ban which has been clamped on Japanese government workers.

Maj. Gen. A. P. Kislenko, acting Russian member of the Allied Council for Japan, sent MacArthur a letter asserting the ban violated the Potsdam declaration and policies of the Far Eastern Commission.

MacArthur's headquarters declined to comment.

The Russian charged that "measures being taken by American occupation authorities and the Japanese government" were "suppressing activities of democratic organizations" and labor union activity.

Kislenko "insisted" that MacArthur's letter which suggested the ban and the Japanese government order which put it into effect "be canceled."

Meanwhile, government workers showed a reluctance to defy the government and engage in the widespread walkouts their leaders had predicted.

The Communist-influenced communications workers were on the job. They had been expected to spearhead the walkout.

There were sporadic strikes in the railway industry, none serious.

Fisherman Catches Escaped Elephant

Jumbo, a 6-year-old pachyderm, escaped from the zoo and trumpeted his way into downtown Turin.

Finally, Jumbo sighted a fisherman's pole. He became so fascinated with the pole that his keepers were able to quiet him and take him home.

Annexation Laid to Jews

Tel Aviv, Israel, Aug. 11 (AP).—Sources close to the Israeli cabinet predicted today the New City of Jerusalem will be annexed to Israel within two weeks.

The informant said a decision to annex the Jewish-held areas of the Holy City had been taken by the cabinet in a secret session.

(After spending a night in Jerusalem where rifle and artillery fire was the heavest since the latest U. N.-ordered truce began, United Nations mediator Count Folke Bernadotte returned to his Rhodes headquarters and announced he had instructed both Jews and Arabs not to return any fire in the city after 6 a. m., Greenwich Mean Time, (1 a. m. EST) Friday.

(The Arabs, he said, had accepted the order but "so far I have received no reply from the Jews." The order followed his statement yesterday that he was going to "get tough" in enforcing the truce.)

Count Bernadotte was reliably reported to have messaged the Israel government to evacuate a strategic hill overlooking the Ramallah road or face possible charges before the Security Council of violating the truce.

The hill controls the road the Arabs need to supply their garrison at Latrun, midway on the Jewish supply route to Tel Aviv.

Observers believe there are two reasons for a decision in favor of immediate action to annex Jewish-held Jerusalem:

1. To alleviate increasing pressure by the Jewish nationalist organization, Irgun Zvai Leumi, which virtually has threatened an armed clash with the government if it does not make Jerusalem its capital.

2. To forestall United Nations demilitarization of the city which the Jews feel would be fatal to them in a military sense.

Rajah Will Fly Home to Fight Spree Charges

London, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Maharajah of Baroda said today he would fly to India to face charges he financed an almost ten-million-dollar six-week spending spree by dipping into the state treasury.

In a ship-to-shore conversation with the Associated Press before he arrived at Southampton on the Queen Elizabeth tonight, the maharajah scoffed at the charges made by the Baroda Legislature.

"Someone must have put out this rumor about me," he said.

He refused to say whether he would give in to the Legislature's demand for his abdication and had "nothing to say" about complaints among the almost 3,500,000 people of his princely state on his extensive horseracing activities.

One of World's Richest Men

He would not say when he intended to fly to India except that it would be "very shortly" and declined to say whether he would take his wife and young son, who have been in England, with him.

His first wife who has eight children, withdrew from public life after the maharajah defied a state antibigamy law in 1943 by marrying Princess Sita Devi of Pithapuram.

The maharajah, one of the world's richest men, dodged newsmen when the ship docked and sped away by car to London, where it was understood his private plane was waiting to fly him to Paris. Three two-ton trucks later were loaded with his baggage.

He had been in New York for a short visit.

The London Star said he will fly back to Baroda in his personal plane, a DC-3 equipped with powder blue armchairs, a desk, a bar and a kitcheonette.

Denies Famine Is in Prospect

The thickset, 42-year-old prince was charged by the Premier of Baroda, Dr. Jivraj Mehta, with misusing the state money while "famine is staring us in the face in part of the state."

Weighted heavily with jewels when he left New York, the Maharajah said he never thought in terms of money. He said his state is the most progressive in India and that no famine was in prospect there.

The resolution passed by a large majority in the Baroda legislature said that while the Maharajah, who is reputed to have an income of eight million dollars a year, took large loans, often without interest, from the treasury and asked the treasury to write off some of the loans.

Some of the criticism of him in India centered on his interest in racing and his maintenance of a large stable of horses. He arrived in England this past spring in time to see his horse, My Babu, win the 2000 Guineas, one of England's classic races with a purse of approximately $56,000.

The Maharajah's case will be decided by the Indian government's States Ministry in New Delhi. Rulers of many of the small states who appropriated state funds before merging with Indian provinces later have been forced to return the money.

British, Indian Policies Held Communism Aid

Hyderabad, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Nawab M. N. Jung, Foreign Minister of Hyderabad, said today that the policies of Britain and the Indian Dominion threaten to plunge India into the "blazing danger" of communism.

Jung accused British Prime Minister Clement Attlee of adopting a "pro-India" stand in the recent Commons debate of Hyderabad's refusal to join the Indian Dominion.

"Indians' hostility toward Hyderabad threatens to pave the way for major Communist successes, he said. "It is surprising that Attlee, whose government is so concerned with purging Communists, should ignore this blazing danger signal."

Truman Signs U. N. Headquarters Loan

Lake Success, Aug. 11 (AP).—President Truman's signature on a 65-milion-dollar loan for United Nations headquarters today quelled moves to transfer the U. N. out of the United States.

Elated U. N. officials said construction will begin in October on the skyscraper quarters on New York City's East Side. The U. N. hopes to begin moving in by the summer of 1950. The target date on completion is 1951.

President Truman signed the bill in a White House ceremony today attended by Secretary of State George C. Marshall, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, Assistant Secretary-General Byron Price and others. The President used eight pens and handed one to each of those present.

Demolition at the site, which runs from 42d to 48th st. along the East River, has been virtually completed and excavation will begin in October. Work on the three buildings, including a 39-floor secretariat structure, will start as soon as bids are accepted and a contract approved.

Cost of the permanent headquarters originally was set at 84 million dollars. Repayment of the loan will begin in 1951 and continue until 1982.

'Salute to Youth . . .'

Harris & Ewing

PRESIDENT RECIPROCATES—After receiving the first sheet of "Salute to Youth" stamps yesterday, President Truman presents an album of stamps to Phyllis Tucker, 14-year-old polio victim of Seat Pleasant, Md.

President Truman assured American children yesterday that the peace will be kept and that they will grow up in "the most wonderful and prosperous country the world has ever seen."

He spoke at ceremonies launching the sale of a new "Salute to Youth" postage stamp, issuance of which is tied in with the Justice Department's campaign against juvenile delinquency.

Grouped about the President as he addressed more than 400 persons in the White House rose garden were six children ranging in age from 6 to 10.

Looking down at them at one point he said: "I only wish I were in their class."

"We will have peace in the world," he went on, "and we will have the most wonderful and prosperous country the world has ever seen.

"We are working not only for peace in our time, but for all time. And we are going to get it. I am as sure of that as I am that I'm standing here."

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson gave the President the first sheet of the new, blue 3-cent stamps enclosed in an album. Mr. Truman in turn presented albums to three teen-agers:

Phyllis Tucker, 14, Seat Pleasant, Md., a polio victim four years ago and still on crutches; Peter Owens, 16, New York City, winner of a Boys Club title as the typical American boy, and George R. Ware, 16, Washington, a senior at Dunbar Negro High School and winner of a prize as a schoolboy patrolman.

Postoffice officials said 75,000,000 of the new stamps have been printed. They picture a boy and girl walking together, carrying textbooks.

Tax Lien Filed Here Against Rep. Morrison

Notice of a $1233.62 tax lien was filed yesterday in District Court against Representative James H. Morrison, (D., La.).

The lien, filed by the Baltimore office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, cites that Morison owes the money for withholding and Federal insurance contributions taxes for this year.

Morrison could not be reached for comment immediately. His secretary, Mrs. Florence Cooley, said that if Morrison is remiss, it is accidental. She said the office has been extremely busy with the political campaign in addition to routine matters and has hired extra help.

Recently, she said, a revenue agent called at the office and an attempt was made to give him an appointment to see the Congressman. However, Mrs. Cooley said, the agent said that he was going on vacation and would see Morrison on his return.

The insurance contributions cited amounted to $78.87 of the total.

Maybank Maintains Ballot Lead in S. C.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 11 (AP).—Nearly complete but unofficial returns virtually assured 49-year-old United States Senator Burnet R. Maybank of renomination today over four opponents.

The count from 1503 of 1559 precincts in yesterday's South Carolina Democratic primary gave Maybank a 9198 majority over the field. Democratic nomination amounts to election.

Maybank's total vote from the 1503 precincts reported was 161,608 against 78,749 for United States Representative William Jennings Bryan Dorn of Greenwood, 43,068 for Neville Bennett of Clio, 17,689 for Alan Johnstone of Newberry and 14,904 for Marcus A. Stone of Florence and Dillon.

Dorn conceded Maybank's victory early in the afternoon and expressed his congratulations.

Representative John P. Richards of Lancaster triumphed over Cherokee County Probate Judge Roy C. Cobb in the Fifth District. The vote from 247 of 249 Precincts was Richards 26,268, Cobb 17,070.

Hugo S. Sims, jr., 27-year-old Orangeburg attorney and State legislator, upset Representative John J. Riley of Sumter in the Second District. Returns from all but two of the 254 precincts gave Sims 33,747 to 29,045 for Riley, who conceded defeat.

Complete returns in the Third District put James B. Hare of Saluda and former Representative John C. Taylor of Anderson in a second race. The count was Hare, 26,007; Taylor, 17,319.

McMath Sees Victory In Arkansas Contest

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 11 (AP).—Sidney S. McMath, 36, handsome young former GI making his second venture in politics, claimed the Arkansas Democratic gubernatorial nomination tonight—but his margin was slender.

However, his opponent, Jack W. Holt, wasn't conceding a thing except that McMath was a little in front.

Latest unofficial returns from yesterday's primary gave McMath a 10,526-vote lead. The count in 2162 of the State's 2236 precincts, with 38 counties complete, was McMath 154,724, Holt 144,198, in record-breaking balloting.

In Arkansas, the Democratic nomination is equivalent to election.

Voters renominated Representative J. W. Trimble for Third District Congressman. United States Senator John L. McClellan and three other representatives were renominated without opposition as were several State officers.

Idaho GOP Happy Over Total Vote

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 11 (AP).—Despite a lack of contests in the Republican primary the GOP was happy today over the vote totals collected by its major candidates yesterday.

In the only two contested elections the veteran Compton I. White won the Democratic nomination for First District Congressman over Burnis B. Brigham, Genesee farmer. Asael Lyman, Rexburg businessman, defeated Bert Minwegen, Montpelier school teacher, in the Second Precinct.

Representative Abe McGregor Goff, incumbent Republican in the First District, polled more than the combined total of White and Brigham while Representative John Sanborn more than doubled the Democratic vote total for Lyman and Minwegen, Sanborn and Goff were unopposed.

Thurmond Hits Major Parties

Houston, Tex., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, formally accepting the States Rights Party nomination for the Presidency, tonight lumped hopefuls Harry S. Truman, Thomas E. Dewey and Henry A. Wallace together and charged they would lead America to "the rocks of totalitarianism."

In his acceptance speech to thousands of rebellion-minded Southern Democrats gathered in Houston's coliseum, Thurmond bid for support outside of his native Dixie, where the States Rights campaign was conceived.

"This is no sectional or regional matter," he said. "It is as important to the people of Arizona as it is to the people of Alabama; as important to the people of California as it is to the people of Connecticut . . ."

The tanned South Carolinian spent most of his time tearing into the Truman civil rights program.

The Federal antipoll tax bill would, he said, allow Congress to invade the power of the States to elect their own officials and would control election within the States by taking power from the people.

The Federal antilynching bill, he compared with the Communist system of "taking over from within . . . through central control of the police powers."

"If the interests of New York are served better under laws prohibiting segregation, then they should have the right to prohibit segregation," Thurmond said. "If the people of Georgia are better governed under segregation laws, then they should have the right to enact segregation legislation."

He said the Fair Employment Practices Act was patterned after a Russian law written by Josef Stalin in 1920 and "was made to order for Communist use in their designs upon our national security."

Truman Forces May Go to Court

By The Associated Press

Democratic Party officers said yesterday that pro-Truman forces may resort to court action in some Southern States to compel Democratic electors to vote for the Truman-Barkley ticket.

They said the national committee itself is adopting a hands-off attitude, but that the question may be raised locally.

Alabama's 11 and Mississippi's nine electors already have been pledged to vote in the Electoral College for the States' Rights ticket headed by Governors J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi.

Chilean Unable To Get Son's Wife Out of Russia

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—David Cruz Ocampo, former Chilean Ambassador to Russia, will leave Moscow August 28 to return home, it was announced officially today.

The news was taken to indicate that Ocampo had failed in his efforts of nearly two years to get his Russian daughter-in-law out of the Soviet Union.

It said that Ocampo's 26-year-old son Alvaro and his wife, the former Lidia Liesina, a Russian he married in the Soviet Union, will remain in Moscow.

Chile broke diplomatic relations with Russia in October, 1947, charging that Moscow was fomenting subversive movements here. Ocampo, however, remained in Moscow when the Russians refused to let Lidia out of the country.

MAP LOCATES PARKING LOTS (BLACK AREAS) AND SHUTTLE BUS SERVICE LINES

Plans to operate shuttle bus service from three fringe parking lots to the downtown area were presented to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by the Capital Transit Co.

Operation of the lots, expected to begin October 1, is designed to accommodate short-term, or customer, parkers, who wish to come down town between 9:15 a. m. and 6:15 p. m. The Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, which has approved Capital Transit plans for the shuttle service, meanwhile is casting about for suitable locations for other fringe parking lots to aid both part-time and all-day parkers in the central business areas.

The three lots connected by the proposed Capital Transit service are located at Temple Heights, Connecticut and Florida aves nw.; the Municipal Center parking lot, John Marshal pl. and C sts. nw.; and the Christian Heurich Brewery lot at 25th and E sts. nw.

In the plan presented for Capital Transit by its president, E. D. Merrill, 6-day weekly bus service at 10-minute intervals from 9:15 a. m. to 6:15 p. m. is proposed between the lots. Merrill stated 10-minute service should meet the needs of the lines. If higher traffic peaks occur, he predicted they would be between 10 and 12 in the morning, and 2:30 and 4:30 in the afternoon.

The proposed routings would add to F st. traffic, putting a bus through the thoroughfare every 5 minutes each way. However, Walter T. Vanaman, assistant director of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, said F st. merchants have agreed that if the added load seriously hurdens traffic facilities on the street, they will ask that parking be prohibited on both sides of F st. to add another traffic lane and permit freer movement of the increased load.

Cost for the fringe-parking-shuttle-bus service facilities has not yet been determined.

A new organization, Merchants Parking Corp., recently incorporated, plans to operate the three fringe parking facilities. Downtown merchants, most of whom are members of the group, will meet today to choose their officers and discuss details of the plan.

Expected to be chosen chairman of the group is Gen. David McCoach, former engineer commissioner for the District. General McCoach said yesterday that MPC hopes to keep fringe parking costs "as low as possible" for the customer-users.

The three lots will provide parking space for 1350 vehicles. The Motor Vehicle Parking Agency hopes eventually to arrange for similar facilities to accommodate between 5000 and 6000 vehicles daily.

Recess Appointments Legal, Clark Says, Pay Up to Warren

Attorney General Tom C. Clark last night issued a ruling partially clearing up the status of hundreds of President Truman's appointees who were not confirmed by the Senate during the recent extra session.

Clark said they may legally hold their jobs under presidential "recess appointments." But he didn't settle the big question of whether they'll get paid. He said he felt the salary problem should be decided by Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren.

Since the Senate did not act on any nominations during its recent two-week sitting, doubt had arisen whether the recess appointments made previously were canceled out. Clark ruled, in effect, that the "Turnip Day" session was not a special session of the Eightieth Congress.

President Truman, meanwhile, began issuing new recess appointments to some of the nominees whose names were sent to the Senate but not acted on. The first went to the nine-member United States delegation to the United Nations General Assembly in Paris on September 21.

French Bill Asks Limit On Crime News Stories

Paris, Aug. 11 (AP).—A bill was filed with the National Assembly today that would require French newspapers to limit all crime stories to 20 lines.

These could never appear on the front page, and would bear only the headline—"diverse facts"—under the measure sponsored by popular Republican Deputy Jean Marie Louvel.

The bill, which few legislators thought had any chance of passage, would ban crime photographs entirely.

Barkley Has 3-Hour Visit With Truman

His Pledge

'Vigorous,' Young to Rule Under Dewey

Albany, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey promised a "young, vigorous, forward-looking" administration working for the good of the country and the rest of the world as he opened his active campaign for the Presidency tonight.

The Republican White House candidate told the executive committee of the Young Republican National Federation that the youth of the Nation would be given a "full partnership in our national administration after a Republican victory in November."

Dewey said the Democrats had grown "fat" in office and had resorted to "quack solutions" to cure the Nation's ills. The Wallace third party, he added, "corrupted the word progressive and would like to place this country in chains like much of the rest of the world . . .

"We will again use the word progressive after a Republican victory in November. And, that group which is using the word progressive in a corrupt manner today will have absolutely no influence in our national Government."

Dewey spent two hours in conference with national GOP Chairman Hugh Scott, jr.

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

A seeming air of optimism prevailed at the White House yesterday despite polls and analyses that indicate a Democratic defeat in November.

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, 1948 Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, spent nearly three hours with President Truman, and afterward told reporters that the political outlook was "very good."

"In what respect?" he was asked.

"In all respects," he replied.

The Kentuckian went to the White House with Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate Minority Policy Committee, and officers of the newly-formed Truman-Barkley Club.

Predicts Success

Welburn Mayock of Los Angeles, treasurer of the club, predicted the Truman-Barkley ticket would be "overwhelmingly successful" at the polls.

Discussing a luncheon at which Mr. Truman was host to Barkley, Biffle and officers of the club, Mayock said:

"The President was very affable. He seemed glad to hear that an undercurrent of support was running for him that was not reflected in the press."

Mayock said the Truman-Barkley Club evolved from a Truman-for-President Club that was formed in Minnesota in the pre-convention period. He said he and John Nangle of St. Louis, Stephen Harrington of St. Paul and some others began talking about the new club at Philadelphia, and then got together later in Chicago and launched it.

Calls Meeting "Kick-off"

"This is the kick-off of the Truman-Barkley Club," he said, referring to the White House conference.

He explained that efforts will be made to form local Truman-Barkley clubs in all of the 48 States. Meantime, he said, the national organization hopes to raise a three-million-dollar war chest—the limit set by the Hatch Act.

Senator Barkley was enthusiastic about the new club.

"They are going to carry the fight down to the precincts," he said.

Barkley's Plans

Barkley told reporters he plans to spend this weekend in Kentucky. He is scheduled to speak in Mooseheart, Ill., Tuesday and at the State Fair in Springfield, Ill., Wednesday.

Representative Mel Price (D., Ill.) called on President Truman yesterday and said afterward the Chief Executive is planning "a vigorous and personal campaign."

He said Mr. Truman gave that assurance to him and to Representative Karsten (D., Mo.).

"The purpose of our visit," said Price, "was to urge the President to make his campaign by train with as many back-platform appearances as possible and with stops at those places Senator Taft called 'whistle stops.'

"We found out that is just the kind of campaign he has in mind."

Masonic Club Charter To Be Signed Tonight

The newly-organized National Defense Masonic Club will hold a special meeting at 7 tonight in the Army and Navy Country Club for the official signing of the organization's charter.

Arthur B. Shorey, of 5729 Potomac ave. nw., president, announced that membership in the club is available to all master Masons, either military or civilian, attached to the national military establishment within jurisdiction of the Military District of Washington.

Interest Rate Boost Proves Point, Taft Says

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said yesterday the Treasury's boost in interest rates on short-term securities proves President Truman all along has had anti-inflation powers he didn't use.

With the President momentarily expected to pour it on the Republican Congress for not giving him more authority, the Ohio Senator fired a parting blast in the cost of living battle before taking off for his summer home in Murray Bay, Canada.

Taft said the Treasury's action in boosting interest rates one eighth of 1 per cent should cut down many types of loans and act as a brake on inflation.

"It was the President's responsibility this action wasn't taken before," Taft told a reporter. "I am told the Federal Reserve Bank Board urged long ago that it be done but the Treasury wouldn't act."

Taft, who heads his party's senatorial policy committee, has contended Mr. Truman must share the blame for price rises because he hasn't acted previously to curtail credit, to trim Government expenses or to cut down exports of scarce goods.

The President's friends said he, in turn, will lay full blame for the high cost of living on the policies of the Republican Congress in approving the credit-restriction bill passed by the special session.

Gallup Poll on New Congress Evokes Contrasting Comment

The Gallup Poll published in The Washington Post last Sunday, indicating a "hoss race" in the battle for Congress, evoked sharply contrasting comment in political circles yesterday.

Representative Leonard W. Hall of New York, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, predicted the GOP would have a greater majority in the Eighty-first Congress than it has in the Eightieth.

"We are bound to pick up some seats in California," Hall said. He added that Henry Wallace's inroads on the Democrats in New York would also help the Republicans there.

Representative Michael J. Kirwan of Ohio, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said the Gallup Poll figures, which showed sentiment evenly divided between the two major parties where Congress is concerned, should surprise nobody.

Kirwan, who was reached by telephone in Rochester N. Y., said he "honestly" believes his party will recapture the House.

"The high cost of living will put the Democrats back in power in November," he said, basing the statement on his surveys out in the country since Congress adjourned.

How did Kirwan reconcile the Gallup Poll figures on Congress with the figures giving Gov. Dewey a big advantage over President Truman?

"That will be straightened out in time," he said. "I believe President Truman is out in front right now. I haven't yet found anybody who works for a living who is not going to vote for him."

Fortune Poll Gives Dewey Bigger Edge

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey would receive the presidential ballots of 46.3 per cent of the Nation's voters if the election were held now, the Fortune poll revealed yesterday.

President Truman, according to Fortune Magazine, is favored by 31.5 per cent and Henry A. Wallace by 3 per cent. Voters polled by Fortune cast 2.6 per cent of their ballots for other candidates and 16.6 per cent were undecided.

These figures give Dewey a slightly larger margin over Mr. Truman than those in the most recent Gallup poll published last Sunday in The Washington Post. The Gallup figures were: Truman 37 per cent; Dewey 48 per cent; Wallace 5 per cent; no opinion 10 per cent.

Fortune pointed out that the Southern rebellion was at its height when its poll was taken and said 2.4 per cent of the voters favored Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the States Rights candidate. It estimated this percentage as "undoubtedly low."

Oil Men Given U. S. Go-Ahead

The Government yesterday gave the petroleum industry the word to go ahead "immediately" with its long-prepared plan for combating spot shortages of gasoline and fuel oil this winter.

Attorney Gen. Tom C. Clark promised the Justice Department will not launch anti-trust prosecutions of the companies participating.

Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug relayed the news to the industry and urged quick action to get the program under way, because of the prospects of shortages.

The plan calls for oil companies to pool their efforts in critical areas. Priorities will be given to military needs, farms, transportation systems, and other institutions vital to public health and safety.

Clark emphasized in a letter to Krug that the program is to be temporary, expiring February 28, 1949, or even earlier, if the Interior Department feels the need for it has passed.

Scott Assails Administration

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 11 (AP).—Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., GOP national chairman, accused the Truman Administration last night of not being "honest" with the people on the tax, price and inflation issues.

He said the Republican campaign is to "reestablish honest Government in Washington."

In an address prepared for delivery before a dinner of the executive committee of the Young Republican National Federation, Scott said the Administration "will not tell the people honestly why prices are crashing through the roof."

"It will not tell the people honestly," he added, "that cheap money makes higher prices by creating a better market than can be supplied with existing plant and machinery.

"It will not tell the hard-pressed working man that high taxes make high prices.

"It will not tell the people honestly that 2,200,000 Federal payrollers make high taxes."

Disarmament

Like an automatic phonograph repeating a worn and tediously familiar record, the representatives of the Soviet Union and the Ukraine in the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments belabored this country on Monday for "threatening the integrity of nations everywhere" because it has increased its military budget. The accusation is interesting, to say the least, considering the conduct of the Russians in Germany and eastern Europe. It is this conduct, of course, which has been the cause of American rearmament. Neither the United States nor any other country has the slightest disposition any longer, as Britain's Sir Alexander Cadogan put it, to accept "disarmament without security."

It is disarmament of a special sort that the Russians desire. Its prime requisite, in their view, is the destruction of atomic stockpiles and the outlawing of atomic bombs as war weapons—which is to say unilateral disarmament by the United States. If the United States will promise never to use the atomic bombs it possesses, the Soviet Union will promise never to use the atomic bombs it does not possess.

One-sided as this arrangement may seem, this country is indelibly on record as being quite willing to accede to it—provided only that a comprehensive program for the international control of atomic energy, including a system of inspection and a renunciation of sovereignty in the field of atomic development, is accepted by the world. The Russians and their satellites are alone in opposing such international control. Without it, the British delegate was quite right in telling the commission, no disarmament scheme would be "worth the paper it is written on."

"Does anyone dare to maintain," Sir Alexander asked, "that the situation in the world at this moment is one that favors disarmament?" The rhetorical question satisfactorily answers itself. A measure of mutual confidence, or at the very least an over-all agreement respecting the very sharp differences of opinion and interest outstanding between the East and the West, must precede any laying down of the arms taken up as a result of those differences. No agreement of this sort is to be achieved in the forum conducted at Lake Success. It is rather to the discussions now going forward in the Kremlin that the world must look for the foundation upon which disarmament can be rationally discussed.

Anti-Inflation

The Treasury announcement of a prospective increase in rates on short-term Government security issues has paved the way for an anticipated rise in Federal Reserve Bank rediscount rates. Slightly higher short-term interest rates will, it is hoped, encourage investment in short-term Government securities by banks and nonbank investors and thereby discourage sales of such securities to the Reserve Banks—a practice which leads to the creation of additional commercial bank reserves. Moreover, an increase in Federal Reserve rediscount rates would have an important psychological effect in curbing loan expansion because, as Chairman McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board said recently, it is a warning to commercial banks that credit is in need of continued restraint. The prospective rise in short-term Government borrowing rates has already led to increases in interest rates on commercial loans—a trend which has been in evidence for some time. These increases will to some extent reduce the pressure of borrowing demand.

The Federal Reserve authorities have had another control weapon placed at their disposal in the form of permission to raise member bank reserve requirements. As Senator Taft explained in his summarization of the work of the special session, Congress has authorized increases in member bank reserve requirements entailing a possible maximum increase of about 3.5 billion dollars in reserves. While employment of the power to increase reserve requirements would operate as a restraint on loan expansion, it would at the same time give rise to other problems that necessitate cautious use of this type of credit control. For any bank in possession of Government securities may sell them to the Reserve System in order to build up its reserves to the required amount or for that matter to obtain excess reserves as a basis for further loan expansion. In fact, bank holdings of Government securities are for all practical purposes excess reserves, since they can be sold at any time to the Reserve Banks. And the Reserve Banks, being committed to support the market for Government securities, have to absorb such security offerings to prevent a slump in prices. In other words, efforts to restrict credit expansion by employment of this method of credit control are necessarily limited by the commitment to maintain an orderly market for Government securities at low rates of interest.

However, if the rise in short-term interest rates, together with resort to slightly higher rediscount rates, has the desired effect of encouraging banks and other investors to hold on to their short-term Government issues, the Federal Reserve authorities would be in a better position to use the newly granted power to raise member bank reserve requirements, even though they might be compelled to buy a good many long-term securities to maintain the long-term yield. In short, by cautious use of its power to raise rediscount rates, increase required member bank reserves, and impose curbs on installment credits, the Reserve System can undoubtedly make some headway against inflation in the credit field. The mere knowledge that such control powers exist and may be used is calculated to restrain commercial bank lending.

Reinterpreting History

Mr. Hull's exploration of a three-month working arrangement with Japan (which the diplomats call a modus vivendi) just prior to Pearl Harbor has become a stick with which to beat many a dog since VJ-Day. So it is no wonder it is coming into the spy controversy. According to Representative Shafer, Messrs. Lauchlin Currie, formerly administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, and Owen Lattimore, formerly Mr. Roosevelt's emissary in China, were responsible for killing the American proposal.

Mr. Hull gives the story in his two-volume memoirs, but there is nothing in it about Messrs. Currie and Lattimore. He saw the signs of war on the horizon, and his acuteness was aided by the daily receipt of intercepts of the Japanese government's messages to the Japanese Embassy in Washington. In Tokyo, evidently, zero hour had been set. Mr. Hull passed on this information to the military, and they in turn pleaded with Mr. Hull to baby the Japanese along. Mr. Hull, nursing time, mentioned the possibility of a temporary arrangement whereby the Japanese would get out of Indo-China in return for a partial relaxation of commercial embargoes against Japan. Some interest was shown in the idea by the Japanese emissaries, whereupon Mr. Hull said he would have to consult the Pacific powers. Judging from Mr. Hull's book, there was initial approval, except from China, where the reaction was "violent."

Representative Shafer says: "It is more than curious that in this critical hour of our Nation's history the most delicate of negotiations were in the hands of two men whose services can hardly be said to have been in the best interests of their country." To think that China's reaction was due to Messrs. Currie and Lattimore is to indulge in really high-flight imagination. It is just as preposterous as to assert that Mr. Alger Hiss all on his own gave the Russians at Yalta both the veto power and plural voting. Messrs. Currie and Lattimore are not so important as all that. The Chinese can do their own thinking, and at the time there was in Washington both Ambassador Hu Shih and the government's finance representative, T. V. Soong, eminent thinkers both. They felt, Chiang Kai-shek felt, that they were being sold down the river a la Czechoslovakia.

And why shouldn't they? Nothing in the modus vivendi would help them get rid of Japan in China, but, on the contrary, would confirm Japanese aggression in China. So they threatened, according to the understanding at the time, to make a separate peace with Japan if the United States persisted in carrying out the modus vivendi. However, the final straw that killed the modus vivendi was Mr. Churchill's switch. "Obviously influenced by Chiang Kai-shek's cable to him," writes Mr. Hull, "the Prime Minister wondered whether the Generalissimo was not getting 'rather meager rations'" under the modus vivendi.

Since the incident took place the story has been used to prove a variety of allegations. First, that Mr. Hull was an appeaser of Japan, though all he wanted was to trade a little chicken feed to gain more time for the American military. Second, and flowing from the first point, that Mr. Hull was anti-Chinese, though he was fighting a delaying action in their behalf. Third, that he was too precipitate in his diplomacy, and faced the Japanese with an ultimatum on November 26, though he had been negotiating with the Japanese for nine whole months, and made the November 26 statement because of the need, after the idea of a modus vivendi had fallen flat, to restate American policy for the record. He felt at that time that all plans were ready for Japan's descent on Pearl Harbor. Now Mr. Hull is virtually accused of having been circumvented by Messrs. Currie and Lattimore, anxious to bring about a Japanese-American war!

Of course, the Secretary had to put up with a good many kibitzers. If Messrs. Currie and Lattimore were two of them, he never mentioned them, for his principal headache came from Secretary Morgenthau, of whom he observes with his usual tartness: "This was a further example of what seemed to me to be the Secretary of Treasury's persistent inclination to try to function as a second Secretary of State." Even the President, the boss of Messrs. Currie and Lattimore, went along with Mr. Hull on the question of a modus vivendi.

History is suffering some grievous blows in the present rehash of prewar and wartime diplomacy. The fact remains that anti-Japanism was rampant in the America of 1941. Some of it was influenced by pro-Chinese sentiment, some by pro-Russian sentiment, and all of it by recognition of the menace to the United States underlying an armed and aggressive Japan. Mr. Hull's modus vivendi would have had short shrift from American opinion in 1941, for this had already been outraged by the American policy of keeping up the trade in scrap and other materials till mid-1941. The new story is another effort to reinterpret history on the grounds that America really fought the wrong guys in 1941.

Maginot Line

Personnel relationships in the armed forces come in for some pretty scorching criticism from Robert Wood Johnson in the August Harper's. Mr. Johnson, a wartime brigadier general and vice chairman of the War Production Board and an industrialist of standing, implies strongly that in military "management by compulsion" lies the "Maginot Line of America." As an alternative he suggests that more attention be given to developing the quality of leadership which evokes spontaneous and willing response, similar to the casteless allegiance which he says prevails in industry. Specifically he opposes the concept of universal military training, at least until there has been a wholesale house cleaning of the personnel system—and in that event he says UMT would be unnecessary.

Much of what Mr. Johnson says of the deterrents inherent in "the red tape, the extravagance, the inefficiency, the bad planning and the general obfuscation" is too profoundly true to need comment. There is no denying that in too many instances the Army has displayed a singular genius for forcing square pegs into round holes and removing what little dignity the individual retains. It is only fair, however, to recognize the acute consciousness of these defects which has overtaken the Army. New leadership concepts have received a great deal of attention, and a number of moves are afoot to eliminate unwarranted perquisites and equalize the basic status of officers and enlisted men.

There are many other little things the armed forces can do to make service more attractive, such as providing better quarters, continuing educational opportunities, and the like. The important thing is that there be recognition and equality of opportunity for advancement. If, for instance, the morale of a KP is improved by classifying him as a culinary specialist, fourth class, there is no harm in that. But, aside from necessary concessions to human dignity, it still must be recognized that armies are by their very nature autocratic establishments, as the Russians found out in their now-abandoned attempt at a classless force. War, even the preparation for it, is per se a dirty business, and it is to be doubted whether the elimination of the trappings of rank would make ugly jobs any more palatable. The free choice of assignments which Mr. Johnson proposes would be all very well until it came to the jobs nobody wanted. Someone still has to collect the garbage, metaphorically speaking, and the less glamorous facets of military life cannot be rationalized away by tilting at windmills in the caste system.

Labor At The Opera

The Board of the Metropolitan Opera Association is making another try to come to terms with employes asking for wage increases. In face of a large deficit for the current season and a prospective one for the next year, the chairman and president of the association had concluded that it would be "imprudent to the point of irresponsibility" to meet further demands involving still higher production costs. Second thoughts have allayed the fears of opera goers that a decision to close down would be taken over their heads.

If union demands are in line with what workers in profit-making industries have been asking and receiving in the form of wage increases or other benefits as offsets to higher living costs, the Metropolitan directors cannot in justice plead financial distress as an excuse for refusing to grant any further wage increases. Institutions such as the Metropolitan Opera have at all times to depend upon large subsidies from the public to keep functioning. Their production costs inevitably increase in periods of rapidly rising prices, thereby increasing dependence on gifts and subsidies. The directors are, of course, within their rights in emphasizing the financial plight of the association and impressing employes with the necessity of limiting their demands. At the same time they cannot reasonably expect to escape the pressure of rising costs nor cite those increases as a sufficient excuse for going out of business next year until they have explored all possible means of covering their prospective operating deficit.

The increase in the cost of producing opera has, as the board states, been drastic. But so have increases in the costs of producing other commodities. In the latter case deficits have been avoided by raising prices. Since the prices charged the public for seats at the opera are already high, it may be that not much additional revenue can be secured by further increases in seat prices. However, it is still possible to appeal to the public for larger contributions to meet deficits. But before doing so attempts should be made, and now are being made, to settle with the unions on a fair basis instead of insisting that all further wage increases are disbarred by limitations of revenue.

China Welfare Fund

I have sent for your attention a booklet which describes the work my organization has been carrying out these past 10 years.

There has been much said and written of the corruption within China, of the nepotism and the wasting of funds and materials intended for the relief and welfare of the Chinese people. I am presenting this to you and the American people to show that good work can still be done in this ravaged land if the right organizations are used as the channels.

The China Welfare Fund has been fortunate enough to have had a large measure of success. The basis for this success and that which its predecessor wartime agency, the China Defense League, had, is that the projects we sponsor are truly rooted in the people. The principle, "help the people to help themselves," is not a hollow-sounding phrase we drag out and polish off when we need support from abroad. It is a working principle. It is treated with the same respect policy-wise as our other guiding principle of complete nondiscrimination geographically and politically in the distribution of the supplies and funds we obtain. This sincerity of purpose and the hard work of those in the field are responsible for our growth into all sections of China.

There is one additional point I wish to bring to your attention. The China Welfare Fund is one of the few international agencies which feels that all of the aid must not come from abroad. As a result we have asked for and obtained community support in China. We derive from this backing funds and supplies which make many of our projects possible. We plan these so they can work side by side with the materials and money we receive from overseas.

"Meat Boycotts"

It was encouraging to see the real reason for the high price of meat stated in your August 6 editorial. The price is high, states the editorial and cites figures to prove it, because the supply is low.

Some reasons for the short supply seem fairly obvious. We have been sending a considerable number of breeding animals to Europe to help get cattle raising started there again. The effect of that, however, on our supply has been almost negligible compared to the fact that since 1940 we have been eating more meat ourselves, much more. This should have led to more production. But a real increase in production of meat must begin with an increase in breeding stock. In case of beef this takes, including incubation and maturing periods, first for the breeding animal and then for the market animal, at least four to five years. Since we import little meat, the extra meat we have been eating could be supplied in but one way—we have been using animals for meat that should have been kept for breeding.

The way to a greater supply of meat does not seem to me to lie in greater grain production, as is suggested. We have more wheat now than we know how to dispose of profitably, and it looks as if we will have the same situation in corn after the next harvest. Our Government is attempting to negotiate agreements with other nations that will enable us to send them our surplus grain, even if we get nothing in return. It is a question, however, whether these other nations can stand much more of that kind of helpfulness. A year ago, for instance, it leaked out that 30 per cent of French farm land had been forced out of cultivation, and it has not been established that the free flow of farm commodities from this country was not responsible for that, at least in part.

If we are to find a sound solution for the involved problem of sufficient meat supply, we should begin first of all, in my opinion, by recognizing that we will have to eat less meat before we can eat more, that for a time meat will be a semiluxury. The worst thing to do, it seems to me, is to attempt to solve the problem by putting an economic squeeze on the farmers of the country.

"Of Course"

Death to the adverb! The adverbial phrase "of course" means that the reader can see for himself the meaning of the context. As used by The Washington Post and many other offenders it appears to be an attempt to transfer to the reader the labor of filling in missing links in a chain of facts or argument.

If you will have a card printed to hang in your editorial room reading "Don't use 'of course' unless the sense is clear without it, and then don't use it," I shall be glad to pay for a frame.

Armed Forces Pay

Members of the armed forces who are on active duty may, until January 1, 1949, claim a $1500 income tax exemption; and a recent correspondent, Lesbie Faere, whose letter appeared July 29, pleads to have this continued indefinitely. He makes a plausible plea; but I fear he has not thought it through.

If this exemption is continued the armed services will probably never get their deserved increased remuneration. The retired officer now, because of this exemption, pays practically as much income tax on his retired pay as he did on his active pay and allowance. This $1500 is no help to the officer retired at about the limiting age and who has probably more need for help than the officer still on active duty. A service pay increase, applicable also to retired officers, seems the only fair solution. RETIRED.

Constitutions Confused

It is perhaps to be regretted that the present congressional investigators act as though the article quoted below were in the United States Constitution rather than in the constitution of the nation whose agents they seek.

"Article 51. The Supreme Soviet of the USSR, when it deems necessary, appoints commissions of inquiry and investigation on any matter.

It is the duty of all institutions and public servants to comply with the demands of these commissions and to submit to them the necessary materials and documents."

Communist Indictments

In answer to Chester McCall whose letter on the Communist indictments was printed in The Washington Post, August 6, I should like to point out that his impression of the nature of the indictments is in conflict with the news reports I have read. He writes: "Instead of indictments covering espionage alone, the grand jury found sufficient evidence to indict the 12 Communists of charges of a conspiracy to overthrow the United States Government by force." That statement implies that the Communists are charged with both espionage and conspiracy. Actually they are charged with neither. The only indictments the grand jury produced are for "advocating forcible overthrow of the United States Government." (Washington Post, July 22, 1948). In other words, these men have been indicted not for what they have done, or even for what they may reasonably be expected to do; they have been indicted for what they think.

As a non-Communist, it seems to me, also, that this is indeed an indictment endangering the classic concept of American freedom, as Communist Boyer has said. When a government begins arresting people for what they think, there is no logical stopping point; and the adoption, by this free Nation, of some of the methods of the totalitarianism we profess to abhor is becoming a cause for grave concern on the part of a number of thinking people.

ELIZABETH WILKINS.
Washington.

My congratulations on your selection of the letter of Chester H. McCall to answer Richard O. Boyer's communication of August 1. It's superiority is self-evident. Coupled with your excellent editorial of August 3, "Reply to a Communist" The Washington Post continues to provide its public with a forum that measures up to our urgent need. That is opportunity for those who differ on social, political, ideological or economic problems to exchange ideas within the free give-and-take of reasoned argument and legitimate persuasion.

T. E. MATTINGLY, M. D.
Washington.

Mr. McCall's premise, if it can be called that, is that Mr. Boyer's letter is "a classic example of irrationality." But his clarification assumes a great many doubtfuls. For instance, Mr. McCall assumes that what is a "traditional American" procedure is a proper procedure, that the length of time taken to investigate facts indicates "care taken" in gathering the facts, that the jury to decide guilt and innocence is made up of "peers of those indicted," that it is only through a "fanciful flight of defensive communistic rationalization" that Mr. Boyer could doubt any of the "traditional American" principles involved in the trial.

Mr. McCall "can only laugh" when he reads that the Communist Party "does not favor force and violence." We may laugh with him, but only if we shut our minds to the fact that our own Government came to power with considerable "force and violence." And is it true that everything Boyer writes "testifies to the absurdity of communistic reasoning" or to the absurdity of Mr. Boyer's reasoning? Mr. McCall concludes, certain that it is no more than "gall" that makes Mr. Boyer argue as he does.

I believe that if I understood Mr. McCall apart from his dialectical confusion, we should be in substantial agreement; but his letter is not calculated to provoke thought—perhaps anger and confusion, but never thought.

Communist Registration

Since it is a well known fact that the American Communist Party or the American branch of the Communist Party, is an agent of the Soviet government, why cannot it be compelled to register as such under laws now on our statute books?

When a person enjoying the privileges of United States citizenship becomes a member of the Communist Party what oath of allegiance to that party does he take? If, as one must suspect, the Communist oath is a disavowal of allegiance to the United States, does not that automatically disqualify all American Communists from United States citizenship?

As a political party, the Communists in this country have little significance, for after a quarter of a century their total membership is still under 100,000. But as agents of a foreign power, especially a powerful, potential enemy like Russia, then a membership of 100,000 former American citizens becomes something to be viewed in a totally different light.

Is there at present no legal means by which the membership of the Communist Party can be given the light of day? I don't mean the membership as a whole, I mean the publication of the name, address and occupation of every individual member of that party. I have a conviction that the Communist Party would not long survive that kind of publicity.

War Babies' Schooling

By Malvina Lindsay

Lack Of Teachers

THAT MOMENTOUS first day at school will come next month for the largest group of 5-and 6-year-olds in the Nation's history. But the Nation's educational system will not be ready for them. The trained elementary teacher with a head and a heart capable of giving this knocked-about crop of war babies the understanding, guidance and sense of security it needs is still at a premium.

The high schools are getting manned with teachers, but not the elementary ones. This is partly because of the tradition that there's more money and prestige in high school teaching, and the work is not so exacting. Very slowly the country is waking to the fact that the super teacher is needed above all in the early grades, where children's personalities are being set and their futures determined.

The Census Bureau estimates that about 2,500,000 first-graders will start to school in September—300,000 more than a year ago. There will also be a big wave of kindergartners. These are the early war babies, born in the uncertain, excited and chaotic days of 1942 and 1943. Many of these children were the sleeping and wailing infants who abounded on trains, buses and in railway stations during war days. Many were lugged from camp to camp. Many got their start in life in the crowded homes of relatives. Many today are without fathers. Many are the children of divorce.

THE WORST shortage of elementary teachers is in rural regions, especially in poor States. Hence, many war babies most in need of a pleasant and stimulating school life will not receive it. Much school housing in such regions is ramshackle and insanitary. In rural regions are found about five sixths of the 100,000 teachers operating under emergency permits, usually with substandard qualifications, persons who were pressed into service in the makeshifts of wartime.

Had Federal aid to education legislation been passed at the last session of Congress, some backward States—and their war babies—might have benefited this year as they would have been assisted in providing minimum educational programs. In some regions the most primitive schooling—if any—will be provided for the new crop of elementary pupils.

Next month's wave of kindergartners and first-graders will roll on through the schools. Even larger waves of children will follow. By September, 1953, the Census Bureau estimates, 3,750,000 first-graders will be enrolling. This means a demand for more teachers on up through the grades. An additional 100,000 elementary teachers a year will be needed for the next five years, educators say. But only 20,000 have received certificates this year. Many of these had only the minimum of training.

FOR THE last half dozen years that the tide of war babies was getting ready to roll, there has been widespread and continued talk of their future schooling. Some communities have taken action—voted bonds, started building programs, raised teachers' qualifications and salaries. But the importance of the problem has not come home to citizens generally. They have especially failed to realize the psychological urgency of getting the right "under 7" handling and guidance of this great mass of children who will be voting in the crucial 1960's.

Now the situation is catching up with them. Educators who have been crying all along about it now term it desperate. Its solution, of course, requires the spending of more funds on education. But that alone is not enough. It requires the aroused and sustained study, interest and action of every citizen who is concerned that half-educated and maladjusted citizens do not run the country in the critical years ahead.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Lost Opportunity

THERE IS little doubt, I think, that we have missed our best chance to extricate ourselves successfully and gracefully from the Berlin affair. On July 19 the German minister-presidents declared that they were opposed to the creation of a western German state. Now the Soviet blockade of Berlin was imposed after the London agreements to proceed forthwith to the creation of a German state with its capital at Frankfurt, and it is certain that the blockade will not be lifted unless a formula is agreed to, which reopens to four-power negotiation the decisions made by the three Western powers.

LIPPMANN

The attitude of the German minister-presidents offered us a good way out of our predicament. Since the Germans were rejecting our offer of a government, we could have offered the Russians a modus vivendi under which the blockade would be lifted and the project of the western German state postponed and reconsidered. The Russians would, of course, have retained their power to reimpose the blockade. But we would have retained the power to revive the plan of a western German state.

The bargain would have restored the position of both sides as it was before this summer's crisis. Neither would have suffered a diplomatic defeat, or surrendered to the other its rights, commitments, or power.

BUT THE diplomatic opportunity opened up by the German minister-presidents was refused. The military governors, no doubt with the full support of the Foreign Office and the State Department, put pressure on the Germans to reverse themselves. The Germans did reverse themselves, and they are proceeding to establish the western German state which two weeks earlier they said they did not want.

As a result we are now negotiating with Stalin and Molotov for a formula under which a four-power conference can reopen the decision which General Clay and Ambassador Murphy have just pushed the Germans to accept. It would have been a handsomer piece of diplomacy to have taken advantage of the German position, to have made the German refusal to create a state rather than the pressure of the Soviet blockade of Berlin the basis of our willingness to reopen and reconsider the London agreements.

ONCE THE Germans had formally gone on record against the Frankfurt government, it would have been sensible and dignified to say: If the Germans do not want the government we have offered them, then we are not going to compel the Germans to form a government; if they do not want it, they will never genuinely support it; if they are opposed to it, then the western German state can never be anything but a puppet of the military governors, a puppet, moreover, on which no reliance can be placed.

To have forced the Germans to reverse themselves in the midst of the Berlin crisis was an inordinately unwise thing to do. For now if we go to a four-power conference about Germany, we shall have to order the Germans not to do what we have ordered them to do.

They will point to the original rejection as evidence that they were wiser than their conquerors, and Mr. Molotov will have an altogether gratuitous diplomatic success. He will have reopened the London agreements against which he protested. He will have compelled us to negotiate under duress, and to recede from our insistence that the blockade must be lifted as a "prerequisite" of negotiations.

THE CRUCIAL question in the present negotiations is whether we can work out an arrangement under which we can negotiate on Europe and the world, not under the duress of the Berlin crisis but with freedom, equality, and flexibility. Negotiations require a long time. But winter is approaching. The Russians are not likely to overlook the fact that the airlift to Berlin will run into grave difficulties when winter sets in, when the weather is bad, the pilots tired, the planes wearing out. Nor are they likely, except perhaps at a price, to lift the blockade so that we may, as several foolish commentators have announced, build up stockpiles in Berlin against the winter.

A four-power conference in September will be a poor prospect indeed if it does not rest upon a working agreement which permits the negotiations to continue throughout the winter and into next spring. The agreement will be worthless unless it permits the four-power conference not only to meet but also to adjourn, and to meet again, and to continue the discussion through diplomatic channels for a long period of time to come. But there is no use imagining that such an agreement can be had easily or cheaply. We have played our cards so badly that we shall not be able to take all the tricks.

Potato Price

By Mark Sullivan

Huge Cost of Support Policy

THE FIRST article in this column about the Government buying potatoes for the purpose of keeping the price up was printed in January, 1947. Since then, several articles have been printed, and many newspapers and periodicals have informed the public about various phases of this Government practice. But the public information is still far from complete. In the Wall Street Journal for July 28 is a carefully written article by Mr. Edward Hughes which illustrates how this practice grows by what it feeds upon, how an economic folly once started, begets still more folly.

Sullivan

Government, through the Department of Agriculture, buys potatoes at some $1.55 a bushel. The department does not want these potatoes, has no use for them, is in fact put to great trouble and expense to find ways of getting them off its hands. The department buys the potatoes for the sole and avowed purpose of what is called "price support"—that is, for the purpose of keeping the price from going down, which is the same as to say for the purpose of compelling consumers to pay a price higher than they otherwise would need to.

THAT PURPOSE is fulfilled, once the department has bought the potatoes. Without any doubt the department would like to stop at this point and dump the potatoes, or let them rot in the ground, or destroy them, as the department has done in the past. In a recent statement, the department says frankly and accurately:

"Generally speaking, dumping would be the most economic disposition of surplus potatoes, from a dollar and cents standpoint, since the cost of sacking, grading, loading and freight would not be incurred."

But the department has an uneasy memory of what followed two years ago when, in carrying out the price support law, it let millions of bushels of potatoes rot in the ground, and destroyed other millions, among other methods, piling them in heaps and drenching them with kerosene so as to make them inedible. A good deal of public uproar followed that, and one infers the department would like to avoid repetition of it. So, having spent $1.55 per bushel to buy the potatoes, the department now proceeds to spend more in order to get rid of them. It pays some 40 cents a bushel freight to ship the potatoes to processors who make them into potato flour. The cost to the department is now $1.95 a bushel. From the processors, the department gets a tiny return—the processors paying 9 cents a bushel for the potatoes. The net of the transaction, to the taxpayer, is $1.86 paid by the department for a bushel of potatoes—bought for the purpose of making the taxpayer, in his role of consumer, pay a higher price than he would otherwise need to for the potatoes he himself consumes.

But the taxpayer's grief is not yet complete. The processors, after they have made the potatoes into potato flour, find a market for it in the Army, which uses the flour to feed people in occupied Germany. For the flour, the Army pays 7 cents a pound. As 10 pounds of flour comes from each bushel of potatoes, this amounts to 70 cents per bushel. This Army expenditure is, of course, borne by the taxpayer. But this example of Government ineptitude, still feeding the German people three years after the end of the war, is another story not relevant here.

THE TOTAL LOSSES incurred by the Government by buying potatoes for the purpose of keeping the price up are enormous. In 1946 the loss was $90,963,000, a large portion of which was paid for potatoes which were left to rot in the ground or otherwise destroyed or spoiled in storage. Last year the loss was $39,529,000. This year the department has already paid out 17 million dollars for 11 million bushels of early potatoes. The total to be bought by the Government is expected to be 45 million bushels, at an anticipated cost of 70 million dollars or more. The loss involved cannot yet be estimated, but it will be great.

These figures are the measure of an economic insanity and a perversion of government. The perversion is embodied in acts of Congress, which make it mandatory for the Department of Agriculture to support the prices of farm products. Since farm products are food, this amounts to an assumption that keeping up the price of food is a proper function of government. The perversion is made glaring by the effect on the whole public, literally everybody, who are consumers of food. The cost to the public, as taxpayers, is ascertainable, and large enough, but the cost in the form of increased prices paid for potatoes, is enormously greater.

Drop in Poultry, Egg Prices After Christmas Predicted

cent of the turkeys on American farms this year that there were in 1947. They are going to be scarce and expensive this Thanksgiving when most things are going to be available in abundance.

The reason for the scarcity of turkeys, and chickens too for that matter, is given as the outgrowth of the poultryless days last year and the scarcity and high price of feed. Now that feed is going to be cheap and lots of it, the turkeys and chickens are not on the farm. But the hatching of eggs and increasing of chicken flocks is not a long biological process. On the farm the chicken and turkey business is largely the farm wife's job. She will be back on the job in a big way very shortly, although it is too late for this year's turkeys.

The break in poultry prices is predicted for right after Christmas. The same thing is predicted for eggs. Although eggs have a Government supported price, the increase in production expected next year may very well create a situation where the support price will have to be lowered.

As a matter of fact the Agricultural Act of 1948, passed by Congress and signed by the President, in this political year extends through December 31, 1949, with 90 per cent of parity price for hogs, as well as chickens, eggs and milk. With dairy and poultry feeds available in great supply at lower prices, questions will be raised as to the present Government support price policy.

The price of mill feeds, used mostly for dairy and beef cattle, reached a high of $85 per ton last January. Now they are selling for $38 per ton and are expected to go lower. The hay crop is good this year and the prices are expected to drop drastically from a high of $30 per ton. Poultry is fed on corn and wheat and both are plentiful and cheaper.

Output Under Prewar

The story on butter is another case where production is considerably below the prewar level—40 per cent below, so far as Minnesota manufacture is concerned. This goes back to wartime, when it was impossible to get the needed help to run dairy farms. Dairy herds were culled of poor producers and the beef prices became more attractive as time went by. It was quick money, instead of the moderate monthly milk check. Feed prices were going up constantly. Pastures were valuable for grain raising.

And so the milk production went down. The prices of whole milk went up so fast that sale to the milk distributors became a big factor. And more milk went into cheese, an industry that is now developing at a rapid rate in Minnesota.

There is no doubt, either, that the increase in the sale of oleomargarine had a pronounced effect on the production of butter.

But again the farmer had his eye on the future. He kept his good producing cows. He is ready to start keeping his heifers and promising young stock and, with feed more plentiful, and cheaper, the production of all dairy products will start up.

Can't Permit a Lag

The butter producers in Minnesota cannot afford to allow butter production to lag. They have too big a stake in plant, in distribution facilities, and in advertised brands. They know that unless they keep constant pressure on their butter, some other district will take their business away from them. Butter is a gold mine for this State and far outstrips wheat in money importance.

So count on increases in the supply of butter and on prices that will be pretty close to those set by Government support by next spring when pastures are good.

At the present time, there is about 70 millions pounds of butter in storage in this country, as against a prewar average of about 170 million pounds.

The effect of lower prices for basic commodities on the price of bread will be watched by consumers with great interest.

The majority of the big commercial bakers also want to see lower prices on bread and other bakery products, according to experts. Bread baking is a volume business. When consumption is off, as it is now, the unit cost goes up. To increase consumption, lower prices of bread are vital, according to the best authorities. The average price of a pound of white bread across the country today is 13.6 cents. In Washington it varies between 14 and 15 cents. Bakers would like to see a price of 12 cents, our informants say.

Flour Down to $1.50

The price of flour is down $1.50 per barrel since January 1. Sugar and lard, important ingredients, are also down. Dried milk is fairly constant in price, but will probably be cheaper next summer. Cottonseed oil will be in big supply.

But against cheaper commodities, bakers across the country have had a 22½-cent per hour increase in the cost of labor, bringing the wage of the average baker to around $1.50 per hour. Freight and increased cost of distribution are also factors.

If the bakers can balance these increases against cheaper commodities the price of bread can be expected to go down. Right now bakers are struggling with higher priced inventories of flour, sugar, lard and other materials. Most baking inventories are on a 120-day basis.

Other things being equal, both consumer and baker will get their wish—cheaper bread.

One of the biggest crops in the Northwest this year is flax—one of the most hazardous crops to raise. It may well be the biggest money crop in Minnesota, and that is also true of North and South Dakota. The flax crop in these three States is estimated at 34 million bushels. There is a guaranteed price of $6 per bushel on flax, and flax farmers will net small-sized fortunes. As a result of the big flax crop there will be a bigger supply of linseed oil, most of which goes into paints and varnishes. This has nothing to do with food, but is another facet to the fortunate position of the farmer in this year of 1948.

This great crop has changed the entire atmosphere here in Minneapolis, as it undoubtedly has in every agricultural community.

It has removed the uncertainty that has been a heavy burden on farmers and food processors alike.

They have all made money—big money—in these postwar years, but their operations have been subject to unusual hazards.

Wheat acreage has been subject, to a large degree, to foreign requirements. Whether the farmer should raise more pigs has been a tough decision with feed costs sky high. Whether it would pay to continue to milk cows or sell them to the butcher and avoid labor costs has been another harassing problem.

Today the farmers seem fairly tranquil—for farmers. They see an abundance of cheap feed, they see improved world food conditions, they see settled Government price policies for the next 18 months. But they are aware of the fact that as the world returns to greater self-support in food production, the market for abnormal production from the United States, Canada, Australia and the Argentine will decline radically.

So the old cow pasture, which has been in grain these past few years, is going back to cow pasture. The farmer's wife is going back in the poultry business, and glad of it. They are planning to put more milk cans out by the gate for the creamery man to pick up in the morning.

Return to Normal Seen

In other words, the hectic postwar conditions may be really coming to an end.

In the same way, the excutives who control the big food processing corporations are no longer so jumpy and so obviously under strain. They feel that lower prices are coming. They have made money in the past by putting out the best possible products at the lowest possible price. They know that business thoroughly and like it.

And they tell you frankly that no product ever made a friend of a consumer who felt he was being gouged on the price. They know that although national indexes show that income is way up and demand for all food is high, there is a big class of white collar workers—ministers, teachers, clerks, professional workers, who are struggling desperately to make ends meet.

These executives would rather get a cheer from consumers than a pay raise from the board of directors.

It points up to a more healthy situation—and it was all caused by rain at the right time, sunshine at the right time, and the resultant greatest all-around crop in American history.

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

11:15 a. m. — Representatives Frank M. Karsten (D., Mo.) and Melvin Price (D., Ill.).

11:30 — President signs U. N. loan agreement.

Noon — Ralph Ackerman, Ambassador to Dominican Republic.

12:15 p. m. — Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.).

12:30 — Senator Barkley and members of Truman-Barkley Club.

12:45—President receives first issue of 3-cent "Salute to Youth" commemorative postage stamp.

1:00—Lunch.

3:15—Budget Director Webb.

Grain Exports May Exceed '47

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

This year's grain exports may run even above last year's record-breaking figure, roughly estimated at slightly above 580 million bushels, it was indicated yesterday.

Tuesday's Government estimate of this year's crops show that last year's enormous figures can be equalled or even exceeded without disturbing this nation's economy, Dr. Dennis A. FitzGerald, food director of the Economic Cooperation Administration, said.

The final total of last year's exports will be announced soon, when the report of the Cabinet Food Committee is made public at the White House.

The increase in the six grain crops this year over a year ago will total 1350 million bushels, the Government predicted Tuesday. This increase alone is more than twice as great as all last year's exports.

The six crops—wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley and grain sorghums—will total 6731 million bushels this year, against 5381 million harvested last year, the Government predicted.

The prospect, FitzGerald said, will make "possible an appreciable improvement in the diet of western Europe."

Earlier this year, before the bumper harvest was evident, ECA planned to cut this year's exports about 100 million bushels below last year. With the increased yields in sight, these exports may even be raised above last year's final figures.

"We have definitely passed the low point in our postwar food supply situation," FitzGerald said.

Not only is this country expecting the greatest grain crop in history this year, but a marked improvement in the European crop outlook is forecast.

Plans are being considered to turn over much of this year's exports to commercial dealers. In recent years exports have been handled by the Agriculture Department.

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 11 (AP). The United States, Britain, Brazil and the Netherlands urged all countries today to admit European displaced persons to the utmost of their capacity.

The four nations also proposed that unaccompanied refugee children be returned to their countries of origin.

In a joint resolution submitted to the current seventh session of the United Nations Economic and Social Council, the four nations stressed a need for speedier resettlement of the 600,000 refugees in Europe.

The resolution suggested a new policy for the nearly 3000 orphans and unaccompanied children under 16, at present in the care of the International Refugee Organization (IRO).

The Council's Human Rights Committee turned down a proposal today which would have made news media publish corrections of false reports.

Mexico submitted the suggestion in the form of an amendment to an international convention on the gathering and transmission of news.

The human rights committee rejected the Mexican amendment, 8 to 4, with six abstentions.

Enlistment Barred After Draft Notice

The opportunity for men from 18 through 25 to enlist in the armed forces will end once their draft boards have notified them to report for preinduction examinations, Defense Secretary James Forrestal ruled yesterday.

Under the peacetime Selective Service Act, all men from 18 through 25 must register for the draft beginning August 30. Their subsequent induction or deferment will hinge upon previous military service and forthcoming regulations.

The three military departments will continue to accept other voluntary enlistments during the draft, however, Forrestal said. He also announced that no draft registrants will be inducted sooner than three weeks after their examination.

Locally, formation of the District's 15-board draft setup is expected to be completed today.

Names of 25 men to staff boards 8, 10, 11, 14 and 15 probably will reach the Commissioners this morning for their approval. On Tuesday, the city heads approved 65 men to serve on the other 10 five-member draft boards and three appeal board panels. President Truman will make the appointments.

Yet to be nominated are Government appeal agents, one to be assigned to each draft board. Frank D. Norton, head of the D. C. Office of Selective Service Records, said men to fill the posts are now under consideration.

Registration will wind up September 18. Methods of handling the registrants are still being worked out. Although the Draft Act provides that 18-year-olds must register, only youths from 19 through 25 may be inducted.

Draft Aides Selected for Nearby Va.

A partial list of Selective Service officials to serve the nearby Virginia area was announced yesterday by Col. Mills F. Neal, State draft director, subject to presidential confirmation.

The nominees, including board members, Government appeal agents and medical advisers for Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties, were recommended by Gov. William M. Tuck, Colonel Neal said. Their confirmation by the President is considered a "mere formality," he added.

In Alexandria, board members will be John B. Abrahams, Edward J. Weiner and Irving Diener. Hannon E. Norris will serve as Government appeal agent, while Dr. Oswald Durant will be one of two medical advisers to serve the board.

Arlington County board members will be Frank H. Eastman and Dr. Louis C. Mitman, with a third to be appointed later, Colonel Neal said. Former State Senator Frank L. Ball will serve as appeals agent, while medical advisers will be Dr. W. C. Welburn and Dr. S. T. Noland.

Nominated for board posts in Fairfax County were Franklin S. Gicker, sr., T. J. Stockton and Keith Price, with John A. K. Donovan as appeals agent and Dr. T. B. McCord as one of two medical advisers.

Guard Opposes Shift to Army

tions would be made until after Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force have had time to study the report carefully.

The committee, headed by Assistant Army Secretary Gordon Gray, said the State-controlled militia plan is too slow, and that the guard today is to well armed and too powerful for purely State missions anyway.

It recommended that the guard be placed under the Army and Air Force, and a new type of defense unit, something like Britain's home guard, replace it.

Murder Attempt Made On Woman at Prayers

Dublin, Eire, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Mrs. Mary Agnes Daly, 27, was charged today with attempting to murder an 83-year-old woman with a hammer while the elderly woman was kneeling in prayer in church.

The victim, Mrs. Mary Gibbons, reported in serious condition, told a special court judge at her bedside that the woman who struck here was unknown to her.

49 Pass D. C. Accountancy Exam

Forty-nine persons passed the District certified public accountancy examination given last May, the District Board of Accountancy announced yesterday.

Most of the successful applicants are from the immediate Washington area, the board said. The examination will be given again in November.

The percentage of those who passed, a spokesman for the board said, is "somewhat higher" than was the case last year. One hundred and seventy-three persons took the test.

Title Charges

Car Owners Forfeit $5 Collateral

Six persons yesterday forfeited $5 collateral each on charges of failing to apply for title certificates for their autos within five days after purchase.

A seventh, Louis P. Steele of 1520 Oak st. nw., decided to appear in court August 17 to answer the charge.

The arrest of the seven brought the number of arrests for the offense to 39 during the first three days of this week. Police took action at the request of Traffic Director George Keneipp, who had warned car owners he would ask prosecution of the offense.

Those who elected to forfeit collateral yesterday were: Carl T. Stangle, Walter Reed Hospital; Agnes Smith, 1 V st. nw.; Elbert A. Glaude, 1207 Park rd. nw.; John K. Moseley, 3742 Benton st. nw.; George W. Lynn, 1249 33d st. nw.; Joseph F. Gobbett, 129 35th st. ne., (two charges).

Trade Pact Signed

Nanking, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—China and Italy have signed a trade agreement under which Italy will supply two million dollars worth of artificial silk in exchange for Chinese tung oil, soybeans, vegetable oils and other products, it was announced today.

The Washington Taxpayers Association yesterday suggested to the Commissioners that at least some police scout cars and cruisers be operated by one instead of two-man teams.

The recommendation was offered as a means of using more efficiently the present police force and so eliminating need claimed by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett for more policemen.

Barrett, when informed of the proposal termed it impractical. When tried several years ago, he said, it was found to be slow and inefficient.

It would be even more inefficient today, Barrett said, in view of traffic problems. Two men teams are necessary for mutual protection of policemen against criminal elements and also to enable one man to rush to a crime or accident scene without first having to stop and park the car.

"The present financial plight of the District government and the uncertainty of passage by Congress of new revenue-raising legislation" prompted the recommendation as an economy measure, Rufus S. Lusk, president of the association, said in the letter.

Lusk's letter stated that San Francisco operates police cars on a one-man basis and that New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland and Milwaukee have a partial one-man system. He estimated that operation of all police cars here on the one-man basis would save $997,500. Conceding that one-man operation might be feasible only in some sections, he claimed partial use of the system could same as much as $665,000.

STOP your lens down to very small apertures and always use a tripod if you want good results in color photography. This is the advice of one of the Nation's top color photographers, Anton Bruehl.

I interviewed Anton Bruehl in New York City the other day. He is among the highest paid photographers in the world and has been well known in color photography for some 20 years, and I thought a few tips from him would mean a lot to amateur color fans.

"I always close my lens down to F/45 or even F/64 to get the greatest possible sharpness in a deep field of focus," Bruehl explains.

"Exposures are long—one to three minutes and even longer. All my work is done in my own New York City studio, even to the extent of building ship-board scenes and home interiors.

"Lighting in color work is even more essential than in monochrome. I use only spotlights—never have used any flood lights. Exposures are made on 8 by 10-inch Kodachrome films in a regular studio-type camera." Bruehl went on to tell me he seldom makes any black and white pictures.

From the first days of color film he has specialized in color photography and that just extends back two decades. Mr. Bruehl does mostly advertising illustration for such accounts as General Electric and Four Roses liquor.

MEMBERS of the National Photographic Society will have a picnic-meeting at the Palisades Field House at 6:30 p. m. next Wednesday. Bring your own eats. Following the picnic lunch there will be a color slide display entitled "England and France, 1947-48 with Maxine Lewis and Anne Cooke" and a show of prints from Eastman Kodak Co.

Prizes totaling $1125 are being offered by the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City, in a dog photo-contest sponsored as part of the observance of National Dog Week this fall.

In order that all interested in photography may have a fair chance for prize money, entries will be accepted in three distinct classifications: (1) Amateurs, (2) Members of Camera Clubs, and (3) Professional Photographers. Contest entries must be in the office of the Gaines Dog Research Center, 250 Park ave., New York 17, N. Y., before 4 p. m. Friday, September 10. A post card to this address will bring a copy of the official contest rules.

A new series of glass filters for Ansco color photography is just announced with the glass mounted in spun aluminum and in sizes to fit standard size adapter rings and sunshades. Prior to this Ansco color filters were available only as gelatin foils.

The UV-16 filter is designed for medium haze correction and for correction of bluish color balance caused by unfavorable lighting conditions. It is also recommended for flash exposures with clear bulbs, using Ansco color film, tungsten type, without increasing exposure.

For greater haze correction than is available with the UV-16, Ansco has the UV-17 filter which can also be used with no increase in exposure for subjects such as distant landscapes or aerial views. The Ansco conversion filter No. 10 makes it possible with an increase in exposure to use Ansco color film, daylight type, under 3200K illumination.

Another filter, the Ansco conversion filter No. 11, permits the use of Ansco color film, tungsten type, with daylight, using the same exposure required for daylight type film under identical conditions.

Amateur photographers will have a chance to get free model service and see professional cameramen and newsreel men at work when Ted Shane brings some 50 of his glamour gals down to Drum Point Beach, Md., Sunday, August 22. Ted tells me a full bus load of his models will leave Washington early in the morning and will make a full day of posing for the lensmen in varied costumes at Drum Point.

Driver Knifed, Another Held in Traffic Row

An argument between two delivery truck drivers over a minor traffic accident yesterday ended with the stabbing of one and arrest of the other.

Bryce Clifton Smink, 27, of 2100 N st. nw., was knifed in the lower left side during an argument after two trucks locked bumpers at Wisconsin ave. and Q st. nw. shortly after noon.

Being held is George Owens, 31, of 2014 14th st. nw., who first fled the scene and later surrendered to police.

Smink suffered shock and loss of blood. He was admitted to Georgetown Hospital. His condition was described as "serious."

Owens, truck driver for a Connecticut ave. grocer, surrendered when he learned police had been to his home looking for him. He is being held at the First Precinct station pending arraignment today on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Owens told police, they said, that he drew a pocket knife and stabbed Smink, operator of an independent delivery service, after Smink struck him.

Youth Admits Starting Fires in Six States

Denver, Aug. 11 (AP).—A 20-year-old Indiana youth arrested in Las Vegas, Nev., has confessed starting three Denver fires which caused more than $700,000 damage last week, Capt. James Pitt of the Denver detective force reported today.

Pitt said Russell Leon Rowland of Terre Haute, Ind., admitted in a signed confession that he also had started fires in Las Vegas, Phoenix, Ariz., and in Utah, California and Oklahoma.

Scout's Whistle Saves 4 Boys in Bay Boat Upset

A District Boy Scout leader with a whistle early yesterday saved himself and three other scouts from possible drowning when their 14-foot sailboat capsized in Chesapeake Bay.

The boys, junior staff members at Camp Roosevelt near Chesapeake Beach, clung to their overturned boat until rescued by Al St. John, fishing boat captain. He came to their aid after hearing the whistle blown frantically by Jack Brennan, 20, of 5600 Kansas ave. nw.

None of the boys was harmed. Besides Brennan, they were Charles McComb, 17, 417 Emerson st. nw.; James L. Hill, 17, 4411 Leland st., Chevy Chase, Md. and LeRoy Vandenberg, 18, 605 Decatur st. nw.

Rain, Wind Sweep City

department said its radio transmitter failed at 6:50 p. m. when it "went off like a gun." A dispatcher said lightning was probably the cause. The Hyattsville police department took over radio communication for Marlboro while repairs were made.

The Weather Bureau at National Airport said the rain started gradually at 5:40 p. m. The temperature stood at 81 degrees when the thunderstorm began shortly after 6 o'clock. By the time heavy rains arrived at 6:20, the temperature had dropped more than 10 degrees, finally plummeting to 66 at 6:33 p. m.

Recorded rainfall at 8 p. m. was 1.20 inches, but the skies had not cleared by midnight.

The forecast for today is some cloudiness with more scattered showers. The highest temperature is expected to be about 88.

Because of the heavy rain, Giacomo Puccini's opera, "Madame Butterfly," originally scheduled last night at the Watergate, was postponed until Saturday.

Mary Boland Doubles

Amiable Mood Helps At Olney's Comedy

By Sonia Stein

TO SAY that a play is good summer theater fare is probably to damn it with the faintest praise on record. But that description seems to fit "Meet the Wife," which is playing at the Olney this week.

It's very light in weight, ancient but not creaking, funny in a routine kind of way.

What saves it from mediocrity this trip around, is the presence of Mary Boland, who created the leading role on Broadway in 1923 and has played it umpteen times since. In that quarter century she has found every nuance, every half-buried comic opportunity the little piece ever had to offer.

A Scrivening Arden

A fizz water version of the Enoch Arden story, Lynn Starling's comedy involves a talkative woman who suddenly finds herself with two husbands. One of them, now a world-famous author, had deserted her years before when an earthquake and its attendant confusion provided him with an irresistible out. The varying degrees of shock to each member of the triangle, plus the other members of the household, as they see who's who and what's what, provide the peaks of excitement. The daughter's romantic problems, which her mother has gummed up good, provide some lesser commotion that's good for three acts.

The production all way around is very nice—charming set, lovely costumes. The directorial job fell to Miss Boland in the absence of Arthur Sircom of the Cape Playhouse, who was unable to fulfill his guest assignment at Olney. She seems to have managed the cast efficiently enough. Some of the players came with her from past triumphs in the straw hat circuit; some are Olney regulars.

Humor in Leash

Cavin Gordon is a well-buffed creature, meticulous of his tailleur and diction. As the first husband who escaped Miss Boland's effusiveness during the earthquake, he uses a more restrained comedy style than the others.

Ralph Glover plays to the hilt and beyond the self-centered dear mama has picked as suitable marriage material for her daughter.

Grant Gordon, the second long-suffering husband, seemed to find his own lines funny on opening night, but apart from that he was all that could be desired. Millicent Brower, as the daughter, looked sweet and charming, and has the most retrousse nose we ever did see.

Dan Stapleton is a very presentable young male lead and a bit of an actor beside.

Strictly an amiable cast in an amiable play, if you feel amiable about things yourself. If you're a bitter old thing, you'll have a bitter old time at Olney this week.

Richard L. Coe is on vacation. His column, "One on the Aisle," will be resume. on his return.

"THE PEARL," John Steinbeck's story of a gem and how it affected the lives of a number of people in Mexico, is being held for another week at the playhouse. Here in a scene from the picture, are Pedro Armendariz and Maria Elena Marques, with their film offspring

New Bid for Belasco Theater To Get 'Early' Consideration

The Federal Works Agency yesterday received a new bid for lease of the old Belasco theater—aimed at providing Washington with a live playhouse—and officials promised to give it "early" and "sympathetic" consideration.

The proposition was submitted to John L. Nagle, deputy commissioner of the Public Buildings Administration in charge of real estate management, by Wallace Cohen, attorney for Joseph Curtis of New York, who made one of the original bids.

Nagle declined to divulge the contents of the latest offer but said it would be turned over shortly to Maj. Gen. Phillip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrators, presumably for final action.

Nagle revealed, meantime, that another party has shown interest in leasing the Belasco, facing Lafayette Square, but he did not disclose any identity. Heretofore, only Curtis and the American National Theater and Academy, both original bidders, have been known to be interested.

Priest Supports Psychology

London, Aug. 11 (AP).—If a baseless feeling of guilt is driving you crazy, you don't need a priest—you need a psychologist.

That's what a Roman Catholic priest said today at the International Congress on Mental Health.

The Rev. Thomas Gilby, a Dominican and a research fellow of Emmanuel College at Cambridge University, declared:

"In principle the confessional is not the place for psychological treatment, nor is the priest the person to give it."

He explained:

"Some people feel guilty because they have done wrong. For them, in Catholic doctrine, a priest is 'a judge and official agent of release' from sin.

Others feel guilty for complex reasons that have no wrongdoing behind them and, unable to get rid of the feeling, become nervous wrecks. The psychologist is the man for them.

Mansion Held Brothel Made $5000 a Week

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—A sandstone mansion just off Fifth ave., with mirrored walls and a secret staircase, was raided early today and police described it as a disorderly house that netted $5000 a week.

Police said the place was the most luxurious place of its kind they had seen in years. The fees, they added were in line with the decor—$100 and up.

One of the five women arrested said she was a Vienese countess.

Behind its double bronze doors were two reception rooms and a magnificently appointed bar. A secret staircase opened at the press of a button. Upstairs, were two large bedrooms hung with fine paintings and furnished with antiques and expensive modern furniture.

Police said a list of customers included diamond merchants, big industrialists, furriers and movie magnates.

Two "prominent executives" were in the apartment when police raided. One was playing gin rummy in the nude with a nude girl at $100 a game, they said.

White House Has Anti-Dewey Picket

New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey wasn't there to watch it, but a one-man picket line demonstrated against him in front of the White House yesterday.

The early-bird picket was Sigmund Pollack, from Dutchess County, N. Y. He paraded up and down in front of the White House, carrying a sign that read:

"Is this man Dewey fit to sit where Lincoln sat?"

Card Index of Patrons Of Bawdy House Sealed

Los Angeles, Aug. 11 (U.P.) — A card index of patrons of a bawdy house was sealed today by a judge to protect the reputations of "top dignitaries" of the movies and radio.

Municipal Judge Joseph L. Call acted as he sentenced Brenda Allen, 30, madame of a luxurious call house, to 180 days in jail and fined her $500 on a vagrancy charge.

Judge Call thumbed through the black box which police claimed contained the names of customers of her house of ill repute.

"Without a doubt this card file contains the names of many top dignitaries of radio and motion pictures," Judge Call said. "Their publication would be ruinous to the reputations and private lives of those people. I therefore order it sealed until a higher court reviews this case.

Cash Buying Still 74% of Retail Sales

By S. Oliver Goodman

Although credit buying is increasing, about $3 out of every $4 of last year's 117.7 billions of retail sales were cash transactions.

A Federal Reserve Board compilation shows that the proportion of cash buying is down from the peak ratio of 1945, but is well above the 1939 figure.

The following table shows total retail sales from 1939 to the present (in billions of dollars) and percentage of the three principal methods of purchase:

	Total Sales	% Cash	% Charge	% Installment
1939	$42.9	65	23	12
1940	46.4	64	23	13
1941	55.5	64	23	13
1942	57.6	73	21	6
1943	63.7	77	18	5
1944	69.3	79	17	4
1945	78.6	80	16	4
1946	100.3	77	18	5
1947	117.7	74	19	7

IN STATLER POST: Effective August 18, William F. Kirk is the new executive assistant manager of the Statler Hotel in Washington, Manager Herbert C. Blunck announced yesterday. Kirk will succeed John J. Cost who recently became manager of the Congressional Hotel here. Kirk comes from the Statler-operated Hotel William Penn in Pittsburgh.

ODD LOTS: Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index remained steady yesterday at $7.18 for the third straight week. The all-time high was set July 13 at $7.36 . . . Canada will conclude this week the sale of 150 million dollars of 15-year, 3 per cent bonds to three United States life insurance firms . . . Austin Motor Co. of London reported North American sales of $11,750,000 since setting up a sales organization in the United States and Canada nine months ago . . . Armco Steel Co. has contracted to buy assets of Jackson Tube Co. of Piqua, Ohio . . . Passenger car tire shipments climbed 26.84 per cent in June over previous month . . . Gross crude oil output in the United States hit a record daily average of 5,504,550 barrels in the week ended August 7, American Petroleum Institute reports.

AMPLE LUMBER: the lumber shortage is officially over. Richard A. Colgan, jr., executive vice president of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, told the directors at a Portland, Oreg., meeting that output this year will top last year's 34 billion board feet by five per cent. The housing industry can get all the lumber it wants, he added.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week Ended August 4	Week Ended July 7

OPTIMISTIC — A majority of business leaders surveyed by the Department Store Economist, a trade publication, expect business volume in the last half of this year to top the record peak of the same 1947 period. A few estimated the increase at 8 to 10 per cent over last year. Replies from 211 business leaders showed that 85 per cent expect increased business, 12 per cent expect the same volume as in 1947 and 1.2 per cent foresee a slight decrease. Of the total, 1.8 per cent made conditional predictions. Presidents of leading department stores predominated in the survey, but it also included presidents of manufacturing concerns, publishers, labor leaders and heads of Government agencies.

FEARS ALLAYED: Will the expanding Army and its draftees cause a shrinking of demand for civilian clothing? That's unlikely, declares the Washington office of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers. Draftees will be permitted to wear civvies when off duty or off the post, according to a letter to the association from General Edward F. Witsell, Adjutant General of the War Department.

EARNINGS: Endicott Johnson Corp. and subsidiaries report net income of $1,629,956 for first six months this year, equal to $1.38 a common share, compared with $1,778,735 or $2.01 a share in same 1947 period. Other earnings reports:

A's 6-Run 7th, After Rain Delay, Beats Nats, 8-3

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CLARK GRIFFITH, the old pitcher, was off on his favorite topic—pitching. The pride of Pop Anson's Colts in the nineties, when he was winning 20 games and more a year, is not bemused, however, by that ancient baseball history. He brought the subject sharply up to date with the observation:

POVICH

"If Connie Mack can keep his Athletics up there for three more weeks they could win the pennant. That's when the pitching will tell, and Connie has it. In a close race you have to string along with the team that has the pitching, and none of those other clubs have it."

But the Red Sox have all that power, it was suggested. "Consarn it, so what? What did it get 'em? They had a nice 13-game winning streak and got into the race and then what happened? Their bad pitching caught up with 'em, that's what.

"You can't wish that ball across the plate with a lot of stuff on it. It has to come out of your fist the right way. If a pitcher doesn't have his stuff, those hitters know it before the pitcher does. The good hitters murder him, and the average hitters begin to act like good hitters.

"It's like Buck Newsom said when he was losing his fast ball. He said he was throwing the ball just as hard but it wasn't going as fast."

THEN GRIFFITH knew what was wrong with Bob Feller? "Sure, it's the same thing that happens to a lot of pitchers. That good fast one he used to throw is gone. He's already lost 13 games this year. In one of his good years he wouldn't lose 13 games all season.

"Feller doesn't have that live one any more. His fast ball is straight as a string—no hop. Those hitters are up there laying for his curve now and pinning his ears back. When he throws them his 1948 fast ball he's doing 'em a favor.

"Feller's good curve used to be his fast curve that exploded like his fire ball. Now it's hanging, and that's no good. The only good curve is the low one. Those hitters can get plenty of power against that high curve that's hanging."

How come Feller lost his stuff? Griffith knew the answer to that one, too. "All that barnstorming foolishness when he was trying to pitch every day. You're gonna get hurt doing that, and that's what happened to Feller. Those hitters don't care whether your name is Feller, Grove or Walter Johnson. They can always tell a fast pitch."

PHIL MARCHILDON'S case is akin to Feller's, Griffith said. "He doesn't have that good fast one this year, either. He used to mix up his fast ball with that fork ball he threw and was just as tough to beat as Feller for a couple of years. Now the hitters like to see him walk out there.

"Those fellows who fool around with those freak pitches like the fork ball and the knuckler always lose their speed. Dutch Leonard had a pretty good fast ball when he joined our club, but that knuckler took all the zip out of his arm.

"The trouble is most of those pitchers try to flatter themselves that they still can throw a fast ball past the hitters. Leonard used to try it until Bucky Harris threatened to fine him.

"We have a man on our club who has lost his fast ball and is having a lot of trouble. That's Early Wynn, who used to have one of the best. It isn't alive any more. Wynn's case is more mystifying than Feller's, though. He didn't barnstorm and he hasn't been overworked and he's still young. He could come back."

HE TALKED about his Washington pitchers. Scarborough's winning because he cut out that foolishness of trying to break that wide curve over the plate. He's throwing fast balls, and his curve is just a little thing with a nice sharp break. And he's tireless. Can pitch all day. Just as fresh in the ninth inning as he is in the second.

"Hudson's trouble is wildness. He has the most stuff of any man on our club. But since he's gone back to overhand pitching, he's wild. That will straighten itself out. I'm still high on him. Masterson is a good pitcher, probably smarter than any of our fellows except Mickey Haefner.

"I like our rookie, Welteroth. He's got just a couple of faults. Right now he's what we call too 'army.' Too much arm and not enough body behind his pitching. He can straighten that out."

And what did a pitcher named Griffith use to win with? Certainly he wasn't famed for his fast ball. "Oh, me?" he said. "I had my own style. I was always pitching against what the hitter was thinking about."

U. S. Quintet Wins, 71-40, Over Mexico

By Gayle Talbot

London, Aug. 11 (AP).—America's court titans breezed into the finals of the basketball tournament tonight with a 71-40 victory over Mexico that climaxed a series of other United States successes over the dwindling Olympic front.

Paced by the 6-foot-7 Alex Groza of the University of Kentucky, who meshed 19 points, Uncle Sam's proficient lads had little more than a workout with their good neighbors to the south.

Officials—Upolini (Italy) and Ashri (Egypt).

They will meet France, 43-33 conqueror of Brazil, for the championship Friday night.

Bob Kurland, the 7-foot giant of the Phillips Oilers, saw only limited action in the final half. He was inserted late by Coach Bud Browning—the tenth man in—and he was ushered right back out again by referees who charged him with roughness.

The officials said Kurland threw a hip into Mexico's Gorge Gudino when the two collided near Mexico's goal.

For all his short stay, Kurland managed to score 10 points, a figure equalled by Kentucky's Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones.

In other sectors, the Americans added emphasis to the greatest of all their Olympic showings by capturing canoeing and weight lifting championships, gaining the finals in the sabre tournament and moving forward stoutly in the familiar boxing ring.

A Yonkers, N. Y., team, Steve Macknowski and Steve Lysak, paddled a homemade canoe to victory in the 10,000-meter (six miles, 376 yards) Canadian pairs event for America's first Olympic canoeing championship in history.

New Olympic High

The other championship show was put on by a couple of muscle men with utter disregard for records—Heavyweight Weightlifter John Davis, former New York subway guard, and Stanley Stanczyk, a 24-year-old Detroit and York, Pa., clerk.

Davis set two world heavyweight records by lifting 314 pounds in the snatch competition and 391¼ in the jerk.

His feats climaxed a United States performance that included four first places and clinched the team crown with a total of 63 points.

Stanczyk set new Olympic marks in three events—the two-hand clean and press, two-hand snatch and two-hand clean and jerk—and he had the highest Olympic total ever for the three—919½ pounds.

His other marks were 286½ pounds for both the press and snatch and 347 pounds for the jerk.

Yachtsmen Have Chance

The Americans qualified five men for the quarterfinals in the boxing tournament—Frankie Sodano of Philadelphia, flyweight; Edward Johnson of Kansas City, featherweight; Wallace Smith of Cincinnati, lightweight; Horace Herring of St. Petersburg, Fla., welterweight, and Heavyweight Jay Lambert of West Jordan, Utah.

Sodano lost his quarterfinal bout to F. Majdloch of Czechoslovakia.

In crowded Torquay Harbor, U. S. yachtsmen kept their title hopes alive by winning two races—the international 6-meter and swallow—and finishing in the top 10 in the other three.

The U. S. saber team gained the finals with victories over France and Holland but lost its opening finals match to Hungary, the Olympic champion since 1928, 10 to 6.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 11 (AP).—Demon Hanover won the rich Hambletonian stake today in two-straight heats, with owner-driver Harrison Hoyt of Bethel, Conn., becoming the first amateur ever to capture the American sulky classic.

Just as he did in the first heat, Hoyt took Demon Hanover to the front going into the first turn, and led all the way in his concluding effort. His victory in the second heat, achieved in 2:02 flat, was much easier than in the first brush.

Pulling away in the home stretch, he reached the judges a good four lengths in front of Rollo, from the Coldstream Stud of Lexington, Ky.

Rollo, second in the first mile, just got up to take runner-up honors from C. M. Saunders' Egan Hanover of Toledo, Ohio, the third-place horse in both heats.

Demon Hanover paid $2.90, $2.30 and $2.10 for the second heat.

Picking up the winner's share of $32,500.15, the Demon reeled off the first quarter mile of the second heat in 30 3-5 seconds, reached the half-mile post, in 1:02, and was really flying as he passed the three-quarter post in 1:33 flat.

Egan Hanover chased him most of the distance, but was unable to stave off Rollo's closing drive under the veteran Tom Berry.

The two seconds scored by Rollo gave him second money of $11,818.24 from the gross purse of $59,914.18—third highest in the 23-year-old history of the event. Egan Hanover earned $7090.94 for third.

In the first heat, Demon Hanover finished the mile a good two lengths in front of Rollo, with Egan Hanover a half length back in third place.

Demon Hanover trotted the mile in 2:03 1/5. As the odds-on favorite, he paid $3.70, $2.80 and $2.50 across the board.

The winner went the first quarter in 30 3/5 seconds with a two-length advantage over W. N. Reynolds' Judge Moore. He reached as Hoyt swung Demon past the three-quarter pole he was clocked in 1:32, with Rollo, driven by Tom Berry, moving up fast on the outside.

Al Sadusky Takes High School Post

Mahanoy City, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—Al Sadusky, line coach at George Washington University, today was named football coach at Mahanoy City High School at a salary of $3060 a year.

A Mahanoy City High graduate, he coached Pottsville High basketball teams from 1939 to 1942 before entering the Army. Following his discharge from military service, he took the job at George Washington.

Galento Show Rained Into Arena

Rain last night aggravated Tony Galento's water allergy and postponed the Griffith Stadium wrestling card till tonight when it will take place at 8:45 in Turner's Arena.

Galento is scheduled to meet Laverne Baxter in the feature bout. In supporting bouts, Golden Superman will face Sandor Kovacs, Gino and Leo Garibaldi will team against Jesse James and Francois Miquette and Elvira Snodgrass will oppose Rose Evans.

Bosox Down Yanks, 5-2; Pesky Stars

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Coming from behind for the second straight game, the Boston Red Sox whipped the New York Yankees, 5-2, today to solidify their grip on third place in the nerve-racking American League pennant struggle.

Last night, the pennant-minded Red Sox overcame a 6-4 Yankee lead with a five-run eighth-inning rally and went on to win, 9-6. Today, they overcame a 2-1 deficit with a two-run rally in the fifth and then added two more markers in the eighth to insure the verdict.

Johnny Pesky, who doubled home Pitcher Denny Galehouse with the Sox's first run in the third inning, started Boston's payoff rally in the fifth with a triple.

Scores Tying Run

Following a walk to Ted Williams, Pesky scored the tying run on Vern Stephens' long fly. Bobby Doerr singled Williams to third. Williams was cut down attempting to score on Stan Spence's grounder to first but Doerr moved to third on the play and scored what proved to be the deciding run on Bill Goodman's single.

Williams started the Sox's final rally with his nineteenth homer of the year into the left-field stands in the seventh. Allie Reynolds, losing Yank pitcher, nailed the next two batters but then walked Spence and Goodman. Matt Batts followed with a single to drive in Spence with the final run.

Indians Still Lead

Browns Rout Tribe, 12-4; Lose 1st, 7-5

St. Louis, Aug. 11.—The St. Louis Browns teed off for a 12-4 victory over Cleveland in the second game of a twi-night doubleheader and reduced the Indians' first-place margin over Philadelphia to .0001.

The resurgent Browns combed Bob Muncrief and his successors for 15 hits to avenge a 7-5 first-game loss.

Bob Lemon was credited with his 15th victory in that one but needed help from Ol' Satch Paige who shut off the Browns after they came from a 7-0 deficit.

Seixas Upsets Billy Talbert In Three Sets

South Orange, N. J., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Vic Seixas of Philadelphia gained a quarter-final berth in the Eastern grass court tennis championships today when he upset Veteran Billy Talbert of New York, 13—11, 4—6, 6—2.

Talbert, third-seeded in the tournament and one of the leading prospects for the United States Davis Cup squad, was bothered by a cold and failed to keep up with the fast pace set by the University of North Carolina ace.

Seixas, meanwhile, played one of the best games of his young career. He displayed a strong overhead game completely outfoxed Talbert with neat placement shots.

Fourth-seeded Gardnar Mulloy of Miami Beach, Fla., avenged his defeat at the hands of Richard (Pancho) Gonzales in last week's Southampton tournament by outlasting the Los Angeles youngster in their fourth round engagement, 8—6, 6—8, 6—0.

In women's play, top-seeded Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and second-seeded Mrs. Margaret Osborne du Pont of Bellevue, Del., hardily extended themselves while gaining quarter-final berths.

47-Minute Wait Cools Off Hudson

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—In the cool of the evening, the Athletics got hot tonight, scoring six runs in the seventh inning to drub the Nats, 8-3.

Sam Chapman climaxed the big push with a grand-slam homer which pushed the Mackmen to .0001 of a point behind the league-leading Indians.

Sid Hudson mastered the Macks for six innings, but soon after play was resumed in the seventh, after a 47-minute delay due to showers, Hudson was on his way out with his twelfth defeat.

Scheib Takes Over

Carl Scheib, who relieved Starter Phil Marchildon after the delay, swatted a two-run double off Hudson which disposed of his lead and brought Forrest Thompson to the scene. Thompson filled the bases and he went out in favor of Tom Ferrick.

Ferrick unloaded the sacks with one pitch—a home-run ball to Chapman, his ninth of the year.

The Nats outhit the A.'s, 6 to 5, but also outfumbled them, 3-0, and four of the A.'s runs scampered across due to Washington's defensive inadequacies.

Nats Get Early Lead

Hudson was staked to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Eddie Stewart doubled Johnny Sullivan home. Sullivan opened the game with a single. Hudson carried his narrow margin into the fourth, but came out of it trailing, 2-1, when the Nat defense blew a fuse. Mark Christman and Hudson erred and Pete Suder took advantage of the two miscues by belting a two-run single.

The advantage was quickly returned to the Nats in the fifth, however, when two Marchildon walks, Hudson's double and infield outs by Al Kozar and Sherry Robertson accounted for two runs and put the Nats in front, 3-2.

The rain came in the sixth, but the shower was nothing compared to the inundation which the Macks manufactured in the next inning.

IN SHORT—With tonight's loss the Nats wound up their 18-day trip with a not-so-hot record of 4 victories and 12 defeats . . . Shortstop Jim Clark, batting sensation in spring training, has been recalled from Chattanooga and Shortstop Angel Fleitas returned to the Nat farm. Clark is hitting .257 for the Lookcuts . . . Idle tomorrow, the Nats swing back into action (it is hoped) Friday against the Red Sox. Early Wynn will do the pitching . . .

They're Praying For Ailing Babe At His Old School

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Xaverian brothers at St. Mary's Industrial School for Boys began saying rosaries today for George Herman Ruth, the star of their baseball team nearly four decades ago.

Brother John said school officials were notified of the Babe's critical condition by the New York Memorial Hospital.

The Sultan of Swat got his start as a ballplayer during the nine years he spent at the school. He moved up from the school team to the Baltimore Orioles back in 1916.

Trucks Hurls 2-Hitter, Bows To Chisox, 2-1

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Virgil Trucks wild-pitched Dave Philley home with the winning run in the eighth inning as the Chicago White Sox defeated Detroit, 2-1, tonight before 13,955 persons. Although Trucks allowed only two hits, Chico Pierretti's four-hitter won.

Pieretti allowed Johnny Lipon's fourth home run for Detroit's only run.

Trucks gave up only Philley's bunt single in the third before the White Sox tied the score without a hit in the seventh.

Kolloway walked and reached second when both runners were safe on Tony Lupien's bunt. Lipon fumbled the throw on catcher Bob Swift's attempt to pick Kolloway off second, and he advanced to third on the boot. He scored on Luke Appling's infield out.

Chicago pushed across the winning run in the eighth. Philley, who collrected both White Sox hits, opened with a double. Cass Michaels sacrificed, sending Philley to third.

Taft Wright batted for Pieretti and popped up. With Kolloway at the plate, Trucks uncorked a wild pitch, permitting Philley to score.

Braves Nip Giants, 4-3, on Homers by Heath and Elliott

McKay Sidelined

'Skins Hold 1st All-Out Scrimmage

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 11.—Coach Turk Edwards is going to separate the men from the boys tomorrow when he sends his Washington Redskins through an all-out scrimmage at their Occidental College training camp.

There'll be officials, kickoffs, punts and other features not ordinarily seen in scrimmages. Time will be kept, albeit the quarters will be shortened somewhat as the Turk doesn't want his men to leave their fight in the gym, to borrow a phrase from Cauliflower Alley.

Every man in uniform except Fullback Tex McKay will see action. A pulled thigh muscle has sidelined Tex for the nonce.

The Redskins have a week and a half of intensive drilling under their belts and it's just about time they begin to bear down and show what's what, Edwards believes.

Harry Gilmer, who bruised his right shoulder last Saturday, unlimbered his soup bone today by throwing some short passes, and Trainer "Doc" Bohler pronounced him fit for duty tomorrow.

Left Halfbacks Eddie Saenz, George Wilde and Howie Livingston also were scratched from the injured list and will join in the festivities.

The Redskins worked on pass defense and offense today, with Sammy Baugh, Tom Farmer and Tommy Mont doing the throwing. Ends Hugh Taylor, Paul McKee, Herb Shoener and Chuck Newman apparently had mucilage on their digits as they pulled down toss after toss.

Defensively, Gilmer and Halfback Bob Nussbaumer were standouts, bobbing up with timely interceptions.

Musial Paces Cards in 9-4 Rout of Reds

Cincinnati, Aug. 11 (AP).—Stan Musial led St. Louis to a 9-to-4 victory over Cincinnati today, enabling the Cards to hold onto a tie with Brooklyn for second place in the National League pennant chase. The slugger hit a home run in the first inning and drove in three runners in the second with a double.

Cincinnati drove Howie Pollet from the box in the ninth, scoring four times on four hits. Ted Wilks snuffed out the rally. Johnny Vander Meer was the losing pitcher. There were 6428 paid fans at the game.

Ol' Rip Sewell Wins for Bucs, 4-2

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11 (AP).—Ageless Rip Sewell allowed the Chicago Cubs only three hits today as he pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to their third straight win, 4-2.

Dixie Walker's single with the bases loaded, the score tied 2-2, and two out in the seventh gave the Bucs their winning markers. Southpaw Bob McCall allowed the blow, after relieving starting Pitcher Ralph Hamner. The latter was charged with the defeat.

Sain Pitches Himself Out Of 2 Jams

Boston, Aug. 11 (AP).—Homers by Jeff Heath and Bob Elliott provided all the Boston runs today as the National League's pace-setting Braves shaded the New York Giants 4-3 before a good midweek day crowd of 18,961 paid fans, augmented by 7100 knothole guests.

The victory was the fifteenth of the season for Johnny Sain who has lost 10. Sain was in trouble in the second and seventh innings but wriggled out, stranding three New Yorkers each time.

Heath walloped his thirteenth homer of the season, his third at Braves field over the right center field fence, in the first inning with two mates aboard. Earl Torgeson and Elliott, who had walked, scored ahead of Heath.

Elliott's drive was a high smash over the wall in left at the start of the sixth.

Heath's homer was the first hit given up by starter, and loser, Larry Jansen who has been defeated but twice by the Braves in the past two seasons. He has defeated the Tribe seven times.

Sid Gordon homered for New York to start the fifth, his twenty-second of the season.

Georgia Honors Negro Girl Winner Of Olympic Medal

Albany, Ga., Aug. 11 (AP).—For the first time in history this south Georgia town is going to have a parade for a Negro—Alice Coachman, Olympic champion.

The plans were being made today and just about every big wig in the community is planning to be on hand to honor the 25-year-old daughter of a laundry worker.

Miss Coachman was the first American woman to cop a gold medal for first place in the track and field events at London. She crossed the bar in the high jump at 5 feet 6½ inches to set a new Olympic record.

Curtis Opens Play For Singles Title

Oakland, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—John Curtis of Washington will make a delayed start in defense of his Mountain Lake Park men's singles tennis championship today.

Curtis, given two byes and seeded first, will play his first match against Jack Potter of Belvoir, Va., who advanced to the quarter-finals yesterday by defeating D. N. Thomasson of Chicago and L. Middlekamp of Mount Rainier.

Curtis retired the tourney's challenge cup last year by taking his third straight title. Barney Welsh, attorney from Rickville and seeded second, also will be playing his first match today.

Boggs Beats Plebes For D. C. Firemen, 3-1

Annapolis, Aug. 11.—Ernie Boggs pitched a four-hitter and struck out 13 as the District Fire Department trimmed the Navy Plebes, 3-1, here today.

Maneuvering Counts

This Cycling's Funny Game—Race Isn't Always to Swift

London, Aug. 10 (AP).—Bicycling is one sport where the race is not always to the swift. Often it's the smartest racer who wins—and he may not have to race more than a couple of hundred yards to win a 1000-meter contest.

This typically European sport has more than a few fine points, as the American entries are learning in these Olympic games—where the Europeans as usual are mopping up all cycling medals.

A newcomer to bike races would certainly be amazed at the way the race that is billed as 1000-meter scratch race starts. They don't begin pedaling furiously at the starter's gun and race each other to the finish line. Oh, no.

The two contestants begin by drawing lots to see who leads the way around the first quarter-mile lap. Then they start out slowly, the allotted one in front, traveling at a pace suitable for two lovers on a Sunday afternoon spin.

At the end of the first lap, the judges ring a bell, and you might expect that here at last the racing would begin. Oh, no.

More likely they both stop dead still, balancing their wheels expertly—and eyeing each other cautiously. Then one will move forward gingerly, still slowly, the other hanging on close.

This jockeying for position goes on another lap and a half at least, with the speed increasing only slightly. Then suddenly the crowd roars. The rider in blue has made his break.

At this stage, there are usually only about 200 meters or so left, and the man who gets left far behind by this sudden break is almost a sure loser.

Why don't they race all the way? Because at high speeds the man in front breaks the wind of the one behind him, who can almost coast along. Then at the finish the fresh man in the rear could come around with a burst of speed and beat his tiring rival handily.

The rule requiring lot drawing for the first lap lead was put in after a world championship race at Rome in 1932 where the two racers stood stock still at the starting line for 11 minutes, each hoping the other would go first and break the wind.

It is in this maneuvering that Americans lack experience. There is very little cycle racing in the United States—and lots of it in Europe.

The American team is making a creditable showing, however, and promises to do even better in the longer events where the racing is a straightaway test of speed and endurance.

Jack Heid, 24-year-old sprinter from Westwood, N. J., has caught the eye of European experts as a potential champion despite his quarter final defeat in the 1000 meters match race.

He is regarded a threat to Europe's stars in the 1000 meters time trial, where racers pump all the way for all they're worth against the clock. That race comes off Wednesday.

On the same day, the tandem team of Marvin Thompson and Alfred Stiller of Chicago races in the 2000 meters quarterfinals, and four American distance men compete in the 121-mile road race.

The road racers are Wendell Rollins of Salt Lake City, Utah; Edward Lynch, Compton, Calif.; Frank Briland, Chicago, and Chester Nelsen, jr., St. Louis.

The American lost out in the first round of the 4000 meters team pursuit race. They had to run with only three men—instead of the permitted four — when Robert Travand of Detroit broke a wrist in a practice spill.

Dodgers Beat Phillies, 3-2

Brooklyn, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers swept their three-game series from the Philadelphia Phillies today, beating the Phils, 3-2, with Marv Rackley singling home Billy Cox with the winning run in the ninth inning.

Veteran Dutch Leonard paved the way for his own downfall when he walked Billy Cox with two down in the ninth. Pitcher Erv Palica followed with a single and Rackley with his fourth hit of the game to break it up.

Dick Sisler gave the Phils their first run in the sixth with a homer and Eddie Miller temporarily tied the count in the ninth with a four-bagger.

Palica scattered 8 hits and fanned 10 in posting his fifth victory as against as many setbacks. The loss was Leonard's eleventh as against nine triumphs.

Rosedale, Hillcrest Win in Softball Meet

Rosedale trounced Buchanan, 21-4, and Hillcrest defeated Takoma, 8-3, yesterday in senior division play of the District Recreation Department's Neighborhood Division softball tournament at Fairlawn.

Won't Raid Farm Clubs to Bolster Bucs, Says Pilot

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11 (AP).—Manager Billy Meyer of the Pittsburgh Pirates has turned thumbs down on farm club "raiding" to bolster the Buccos.

His decision answered pointed suggestions by local baseball writers that several stars from the farm club at Indianapolis, now leading the American Association, be summoned for duty in the majors.

Meyer said that he did not want Outfielder Ted Beard, nor any other Indianapolis star at this time. The canny Bucco leader said:

"I'd prefer to let Ted and the others get the seasoning they need in Indianapolis. After all, Beard has made a pretty big jump already in moving from Selma (Ala.) to Indianapolis. He's too good a prospect to ruin by moving along too fast."

Hutchison Furniture trimmed Auto Row, 8-6, yesterday at Fairlawn in the first of a three-game series for the junior championship of the Boys' Club of Washington Baseball League.

Paul Weinstein scored the winning run when his fourth-inning single was followed by three Auto Row misplays.

Olympic Heads Fire 37 Referees, Boxing Judges

London, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Reliable Olympic officials disclosed tonight that the Olympic jury of appeals decided at a private meeting today to "clean house" by discharging 37 referees and judges of boxing.

The officials said that only eight referees and 12 judges of the 57 originally listed by the Olympic Boxing Committee would be retained. The firings will be effective tomorrow, and several of the dismissed officials have already been notified.

The decision followed three days filled with storms of protest over decision in the Olympic Boxing Tournament.

Each fight which goes the Olympic distance of three rounds without a knockout is decided on a basis of points. The verdict is handed down by three judges appointed for each fight. The referee has no say in the decision unless he awards a technical knockout or otherwise ends the fight before three rounds.

Rack Leads Typo Golfers

French Lick, Ind., Aug. 11 (AP).—Eddie Rack of Boston, Pa., still held the lead in the Union Print Craft International Golf Tournament as third-day play began today, but defending champion Joe Sommers of Detroit was only a stroke behind.

Havens Borrows Czech Canoe After Protest, Finishes Second

Henley on Thames, England, Aug. 11.—Husky Frank Havens, Cabin John, Md., stroked home second in the 10,000-meter singles grind here today in a borrowed canoe.

After the race was over, Havens wished he had been paddling his own.

He negotiated the tough 6¼-mile course 35.2 seconds slower than Frantisek Capek, 33-year-old Prague bank clerk and seven-time champion of Czechoslovakia, whose winning time was 62 minutes, 5.2 seconds.

"The borrowed boat didn't need as much steering," said Havens, "but I was wasting strokes steering when the Czech was steadily going ahead. I still think I can beat him with a straight American canoe."

Havens took the Czech craft after the Americans complained about the bent keels used by some Europeans to help steering. Its bent keel at the stern served like a rudder although it had been slightly straightened for Havens.

Earlier the United States tandem team of Ray Clark of Washington and Joehn Eiseman of Chevy Chase finished thirteenth in the kayak pairs race over the same 6¼-mile distance.

Lanham's 13th Card On Friday the 13th

The world's most superstitious sports competitors, midget automobile racing drivers, must overcome two mental hazards tomorrow night when they step out in the weekly seven-event action at the West Lanham Speedway, 8:50 o'clock.

Tomorrow night not only is Friday the 13th, but this marks the thirteenth racing program of the season at Lanham, and the more superstitious entries unquestionably will be loaded down with good luck charms in their bids to avoid catastrophe.

Gene Wolfe Wins in Junior Golf

Bolster Also Advances at Ann Arbor

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug 11 (AP).—Sixteen-year-old Gene Wolfe of Washington, D. C., was among the early first round victors in the United States Golf Association's national junior tournament here today.

Gene defeated T. Lybrand, jr., of Aiken, S. C., 3 and 2. Bob Wolfe, Gene's cousin, also from Washington, was less fortunate, he was eliminated, 3 and 2, by N. Schlepik of North Brook, Ill.

Other winners from the Washington, D. C., area were Dennis Bolster who defeated H. Beath of La Grange, Ill., 4 and 2, and Billy Buppert of Towson, Md., who defeated W. Ford of Florence, Ala., 3 and 1.

Gerald Williams, 17-year-old Indianapolis golfer, fought an uphill battle today to shine among early finishers.

Playing on the tough, rolling University of Michigan course, on greens made soggy by last night's rain, Williams downed Jim Mullin of Tylorsville, Ill., one up in an extra-hole match.

Under overcast skies, the Indianapolis boy fell four down at the end of the first nine holes on the 6600-yard, par 72 layout. Mullin carded a 38. Williams a 42.

With the pressure on, however, Williams came back to shoot the second nine in par 36, evening matters up with his Illinois opponent.

Then he scored a par four on the 410-yard extra hole to take the match from Mullin, who could only manage a one-over par five.

Charles Beach of Fairfax, Va., bowed to R. Hessemer of Houston, Tex., one up after an extra hole playoff.

Six in Quarterfinals Of Press Club Tennis

Six entrants yesterday were announced to have reached the quarterfinals in the National Press Club's tennis tournament.

Former District Champion Alphonso Smith advanced by defeating John McJennett, 6—1, 6—1. Others quarterfinalists and their third-round victories: A. S. Curtis defeated Glenn Thompson, 6—0, 6—0; Chiles Coleman defeated Henry Borwick, 6—1, 6—1; James Newmeyer defeated Courtland Ferguson, 6—0, 6—1; Col. H. B. Hull defeated R. W. Ruth, 6—1, 6—1.

Farkas' Store Opening Features 'Skins' Movie

"Hail to the Redskins," the new motion picture history of the local football pros produced in sound and technicolor, will be screened four times Saturday, when Andy Farkas, former fullback of the Redskins, opens his second downtown sporting goods store at 714 14th st. nw.

The Redskin film will be shown at 1, 3, 5 and 7 p. m., and the public is invited. Other surprise features also will be presented.

Blackwell of Reds To Wed Coast Girl

Cincinnati, Aug. 11 (AP).—The engagement of auburn-haired Dorothy Davenport, 23, Glendale, Calif., and Ewell Blackwell, 25, Cincinnati Reds pitching ace, was announced upon the girl's arrival here with her mother yesterday.

Hines Loses Heartbreaker:

D. C. Printers Eliminated, 1-0, On Pittsburgh's Hitless Run

Detroit, Aug. 11.—Washington was eliminated from the Union Printers Baseball Tournament here today by 1-fo-0 loss to Pittsburgh. Earlier, New York defeated Washington, 6 to 5, in the double elimination tournament.

The game was a closely fought pitchers' duel, with Ray Brannigan of Pittsburgh allowing only five hits, while losing pitcher, Charles Hines, gave up six. The only walk Hines gave lost him the ball game.

Pittsburgh Shortstop John Kirsh walked in the sixth, took second on a sacrifice, advanced to third on an infield out, and stole home to score only run of contest.

Kirsh further distinguished himself by getting two hits in three trips to the plate, making four putouts, four assists and starting a double play in top of ninth that helped save game for Pittsburgh.

Washington made a desperate try for score in ninth by sending three pinch hitters to bat. But Brannigan retained control and retired the side to end the game.

Hines' teammates backed up his 10 strike-out pitching with errorless play but couldn't make their trips to plate pay off.

In other games today Detroit eliminated St. Louis, 10-7; Chicago ousted Baltimore, 7-3, and New York whipped Cincinnati, 12-4. New York and St. Louis are undefeated.

3 District Women In National Open

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 11.—Three golfers from the Washington, D. C., area will compete in a field of 51 here tomorrow for the 72-hole medal play Women's National Open championship.

They are Helen Detweiller, Betty Meckley and Mrs. R. Watson.

Among the top stars opposing them are Mrs. Babe Didrickson Zaharias, Patty Berg, Kathryn Hemphill, Betty Jamison and Helen Sigel.

Ahearn Tries 'Title' Angle

Taking a cue from a well-known Washington matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn yesterday announced a little elimination scheme of his own.

Promoter Ahearn is trying to sign Gus Lesnevich to meet the winner of the Billy Fox-Johnny Colan bout at Griffith Stadium August 23. If the fight is arranged it will be staged October 12 and Goldie plans to bill it for the "American light-heavyweight championship." This unique designation would take care of Lesnevich's embarrassment over losing his world's crown to Freddie Mills in England.

At that, Lesnevich shouldn't object if Fox wins. He already has scored two knockouts over the one-time k.o. artist from Philly.

Grid Coaches Assemble

Williamsburg, a., Aug. 11 (AP).—High school football coaches assemble here tomorrow for a three-day annual conference on the college of William and Mary campus.

The sessions, which run through Saturday, will be under joint auspices of the Virginia High School League and the William and Mary Athletic Association.

Blue Fedora Wins Shore Feature

Don Padgett Overruled on Objection

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 11 (AP).—Woodland Farm's Blue Fedora finished first in the 6-furlong Midsummer Purse, today, but the gelding's many backers had moments of suspense while the stewards listened to a claim of foul lodged by Jockey Don Padgett, who finished second on Wee Hal.

Padgett argued that his mount was carried wide when Blue Fedora entered the stretch and again while the winner drifted out through the final furlong. The foul was not allowed. Blue Fedora paid $4.60.

Seven 3-year-olds started in the feature. The running time over the fast track was 1.13 4/5.

Blue Fedora had been rushed to the front by Jockey Tommy Malley in the early racing. Clusiana forced the early pace with Wee Hal well up. Wee Hal appeared to want to bear out going down the backlane, was brought to inside entering the turn and was pressing Blue Fedora hard for the lead as the two came to the quarter pole. Entering the stretch Blue Fedora came a trifle wide and Wee Hal was on the outside of him.

Congress Committee Staffs Study Changes In U. S. Leave System

Federal workers are going to hear a great deal about their leave—both annual and sick—during the next few months. Separate studies of the leave system are being made by both the Senate and House Civil Service Committee staffs.

No firm conclusions have been reached by either group, as their reports won't be made public until the new Congress meets in January. However, it is no secret that these are among the possibilities under study:

1. A reduction of the amount of annual leave that can be accumulated to considerably less than 60 days.

2. A provision that so much annual leave—a minimum of 10 days—must be taken each year or else it must be forfeited. In other words, either take it or lose it. Advocates say the present liberal leave system is often defeated by employes who allow it to accumulate.

3. A uniform system of annual leave throughout the Federal service. I was surprised to learn that there are at least a dozen different systems, from 15 days for postal employes to 30 days for temporary workers.

4. There are a score of ideas for sick leave changes, all aimed at stopping it from being abused. Some people want to abolish sick leave except for genuine illnesses such as operations. Others want to merge it with annual leave.

One middle-ground suggestion is this—that employes be forced to use annual leave for routine visits to the doctor and for any illness of less than one day. You can be certain that sweeping revisions of sick leave will be proposed.

There is very little talk of reducing annual leave—talk that was getting serious attention a year ago. Some of the critics of the 26-day vacation system now say the time to reduce it is when the Government puts its employes on a shorter work week.

The standard work week of many classes of employes is now less than the 40 worked by Federal employes. Many State, county and city employes are on 35 and 37½-hour weeks. Eventually, it's believed, Uncle Sam will reduce the work week, and that would be the logical time to consider a reduction of annual leave.

DRAFT: Federal agencies here are slated to register their own young men for the draft. The District Selective Service director has asked the agencies for a helping hand.

The White House is agreeable to it and the request will be approved formally at today's meeting of the Federal Personnel Council. Actually it will result in a saving for Uncle Sam. By registering in their own agencies, the young men will be given only a few minutes off. Otherwise, they would have to be excused for several hours. The records will be turned over to local draft headquarters by the agencies.

LOYALTY: The House Civil Service Committee isn't likely to investigate the much-investigated employe loyalty program—at least, not for several months. Several members take the view that enough congressional investigations are already under way on the program.

Chairman Rees had implied his committee would launch an inquiry, but several other committees beat him to it. He left the city yesterday for a visit to his Kansas home.

COMMERCE has set up a system of honor awards for its faithful and efficient employes . . . INTERNAL REVENUE has given cash awards for worthy suggestions to the following employes here: Richard W. Barkley, Swan A. Erickson, Jaunita Stratton, Oscar Neal, Edward Upton, Mildren Irvin, Carolyn R. Donahoe and Luther S. Hart . . . G.P.O.: Local commercial printers will vote this weekend on a new contract that would increase their salaries about $10 a week. If the increase goes through, printers at the Government Printing Office will be sure to demand a similar increase when wage negotiations are reopened late this year.

NOTES: Several influential Democratic members of Congress are reported to have urged in letters to the President that he appoint a committee of outstanding Americans to examine all phases of the loyalty and security problem . . . John B. O'Neill is making a study of the wages and working conditions of employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing . . . Parking places are being reshuffled at the Pentagon to make room for Navy bigwigs . . . J. S. Baughman is the new general manager of the Home Owners Loan Corp. He succeeds Charles F. Cotter, who has retired.

SPA: Chris Henderson of Agriculture is the new president of the Society for Personnel Administration. Other officers are: Virgil Couch of ECA, vice president; Ellen Manchester of Civil Service, secretary-treasurer; Ismar Baruch and Ross Pollock, both of Civil Service, are members of the executive committee, and the advisory committee is made up of Russell Cox of Navy, Ben Corwin of Red Cross, and Gladys James of Public Health.

JOBS: The Naval Gun Factory has immediate openings for machinists, boilermakers, teletype equipment mechanics, brick masons, and brass melters . . . In the next week or so Civil Service will announce an examination for elevator operators, to pay from $2020 to $2152 to start. These jobs are restricted by law to persons with veterans' preference as they are available.

New Polio Case Makes Year's Total For Area 59

Falls Church Man, 38, Is Latest Victim; 30 Stricken to Date In Nearby Counties

One new infantile paralysis case was reported in the Washington area yesterday, bringing the year's total to 59.

The newest polio victim, according to the District Health Department, is a 38-year-old man living on the 500 block of Shady lane, Falls Church. He was admitted to Gallinger Hospital Tuesday.

The report brought the number of cases from nearby counties to 30. Twenty-nine District Residents have been stricken. Last year at the same time there was three resident and seven nonresident cases.

No fatalities have been reported in the area to date.

Meanwhile, on a Nation-wide scale, the United States Public Health Service yesterday reported the "smallest numerical and percentage increase" in weekly polio cases since early in June.

The service declined further interpretation of the figures and offered no estimate as to when the peak may be reached in this year's outbreak.

According to the service's weekly report, 1239 new cases were reported for the week ending August 7 against 1215 in the preceding week. They boosted the year's total for the entire nation to 7039 in comparison to 1967 reported for a comparable period in 1947.

In North Carolina, 37 more new cases were reported yesterday, bringing the State's record polio total to 1385 for the year. Two more deaths brought that total to 69.

Dr. C. P. Stevick, State epidemiologist, said although the epidemic remained concentrated in the central portion of the State, the number of cases in the southeastern section had increased in the last two weeks. He said there have been a few additional cases in the extreme western section recently, while the northeastern sector apparently is the least involved.

In Virginia, nine new cases were reported yesterday, bringing the State's total to 155. Two of the cases involved patients in Children's Hospital here.

14 Area Men Pass Va. Bar Examinations

Fourteen Greater Washington men have passed the examination for admission to the Virginia State Bar, it was announced yesterday.

They were among 142 successful candidates out of 299 applicants, an unusually low percentage, according to the State Board of Law Examiners. The examinations were given in Roanoke, June 29 and 30.

Successful applicants from Greater Washington included: Fletcher Dew Thompson, 5627 8th st. nw.; Harvey Hodges Holland, jr., 8401 Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md.; J. Wooten Pearce, 5347 Nevada ave. nw.; Russell Morris Carneal, Alexandria; Wharey Moore Freeze, Presidential Gardens, Alexandria; Alfred Burke Hertz, West Falls Church, Va.

John Lawrence Hall, 217 Gibbon st., Alexandria; William Coates Nemeth, Arlington; George Glover Lewis, Arlington; Earl Fawber Wagner, 800 S. Washington st., Alexandria; Neville G. Hall, jr., 2703 King st., Alexandria; Joseph Bernard Kennedy, jr., 1924 S. 12th st., Arlington; Ralph Lucian Payne, 9 E. Glebe rd., Alexandria; Philip William Kelleher, Arlington.

Laskey in College Post

John L. Laskey has been elected president of the board of trustees of the Washington College of Law, succeeding James Craig Peacock, who will remain a member of the board.

Laskey was a member of the faculty of the college for 10 years, but resigned to become a member of the board of trustees to fill a vacancy left by the death of his father, John E. Laskey.

Virginia Farm's Machinery Stumps Displaced Polish Refugee, Family

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

MARIAN ZIELEZINSKI HARVESTS IN THE MANNER OF HIS FOREFATHERS

Rhinehart Calls 3-Month Trial on His Big Place Near Vienna a Failure

Over in the gently rolling hills of northern Virginia, a little way from Vienna, is the large, modern farm that Paul E. Rhinehart and his sons worked at top efficiency during the war.

To that tractor-operated farm, at Rhinehart's beck, came Polish Refugee Marian Zielezinski and his family just three months ago yesterday. The idea was to provide a new life for the displaced Poles, and to operate the farm up to its capacity.

It has proved to be an idea, Farmer Rhinehart said yesterday, that hasn't worked out. The Old World farming methods that Zielezinski knows cannot begin to get the job done on Rhinehart's farm.

And Refugee Zielezinski has been unable to learn to drive a tractor, or a truck, or a bulldozer. He can't operate the hay bailer. He does not understand American machinery. The jump from Poland to northern Virginia has been too much.

That, in brief, is what Rhinehart, 76, had to report yesterday. In his day-by-day records he wrote:

"The Polish refugee family has been a financial loss to the Rhineharts." But he also noted in his records that the refugees have gained "humanity, hope and happiness by the getting of understanding."

Because Rhinehart is a businessman, he has recommended to his sons, Paul, jr., and William, who "handle the money," that the Pole's monthly $100 be cut 60 per cent.

Because he is a "believer in humanity," Rhinehart has begun to search for employment for Zielezinski that is more suitable. "That man can command $1 an hour right along, cleaning a lawn, working in a garden. He is perfection at that," he says.

Meanwhile, Zielezinski, 36; his wife, Irma, 23, and their two baby sons will continue to live in the comfortable five-room home that Rhinehart has provided for them.

And Rhinehart, who still believes displaced persons can fill a great need on American farms, is hoping to set up a training school on his land to educate refugees in modern farming methods.

Transit Hearing Nears Windup in Rain of Charges

'Delaying Tactics' Denied by Lawyer; Resumption Today Ordered by PUC

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Charges and counter-charges flew yesterday as the Capital Transit Co. rate-raise hearings approached a wind-up.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison, counsel to the Public Utilities Commission, renewed his charge that Harry R. Booth, attorney for the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection, was pursuing purely "delaying tactics."

Booth heatedly denied the charge and declared that his interest in the case was prompted by a statement made by Harrison "in open court that this commission (PUC) had agreed to grant an increase to this company."

Harrison arose, shouting, "That is not true and you know it."

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan, who has participated in as well as refereed the frequent verbal clashes in the hearings, thereupon banged his gavel and brought the interchange to an end.

Booth explained that he was referring to a statement made before a three-judge hearing on August 2 at District Court on an interstate rate controversy involving CTC, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the PUC. The stenographic record of the two sections to which Booth alluded said:

1. Harrison: "I might say that there is abundant evidence that the Capital Transit Co., at the rates fixed by the Public Utilities Commission, is not getting that return which the commission itself said they were entitled to have. When I say that, it is not prejudging the case. It is not my business to prejudge the case, and I would not."

2. Justice Holtzoff: "How can this court consider a partial record before the PUC, when the PUC has not closed the testimony?"

Harrison: "I am not asking the court to do that at this time. I merely point out that this commission, after its investigation, would not have started another hearing if it found the 10-cent rate was adequate."

Second Controversy

A second controversy arose in the afternoon when Booth and Ben C. Sigal, attorney for the Washington chapter of Americans for Democratic Action, asked for a delay of several days in which to secure and prepare witnesses.

After making the request, Booth summoned E. J. Milligan, executive secretary of the PUC, to ask him how much time the commission, in the past, has given utility firms to present their cases when a rate reduction has been proposed.

Booth declared that his clients, "as a matter of full and fair hearing," should receive as much time as such firms. His analogy was that both were in the position of resisting a rate change.

Chairman Flanagan ruled against such testimony by Milligan.

Booth then asked for a postponement until he could call witnesses to submit evidence on business conditions in the area, and operating service and, possibly, technical experts, depending on their availability.

Fireworks Set Off

In announcing the latter, he set off further fireworks by remarking that he was "greatly surprised" People's Counsel John O'Dea had not submitted "technical testimony by witnesses."

O'Dea replied that he had no budget with which to hire such experts.

The requests for delays were opposed by the CTC, Harrison and John H. Connaughton, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Connaughton said his group approved a recommendation made Tuesday for a 13-cent cash fare, three tokens for 35 cents and a $1.75 weekly pass.

The company is asking for 15 cents cash fare, two tokens for a quarter and a $1.85 weekly pass. Present rates are 10 cents cash, no token sales and $1.50 weekly pass.

After a detailed grilling of Segal and Booth as to whom their proposed witnesses were and what they would attempt to show, the PUC directed them to be ready to resume with whatever witnesses were available at 10 a. m. today in the District Building.

CTC Appeals Order Fixing Suburban Fares

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—The appeal of the Capital Transit Co. from a Maryland Public Service Commission order fixing fares in suburbs of Washington was filed today in the Court of Appeals.

Capital Transit appealed from a Baltimore Circuit Court order, May 26, dismissing its suit against the PSC. The commission in April ordered the utility to provide cut-rate 3-cent fares for school children in 5-cent zones before it would approve a schedule of higher fares in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

On Favoritism

West Doubts Charges of Judge Raedy

Corporation Counsel Vernon West is doubtful that Judge Ellen K. Raedy has any proof to back up her charges that Municipal Court prosecutors are playing favorites in handling driving-while-drunk cases.

After stating for the sixth straight day that Judge Raedy has failed to reply to his request for actual cases of favoritism, West said:

"The conclusion is obvious that if the judge had any proof she would give it to me. And so far, I have not even been given an acknowledgment to my request."

Judge Raedy was "busy," her office reported to newspapermen seeking comment.

The last time such records were given out, it was at the request of Judge Raedy, who wanted one case in which a nolle prosse was entered by the corporation counsel's office and another where Judge Raedy had fined the defendant $50. She has not yet returned the records, it was said.

Whether West's order was directed at Judge Raedy could not be ascertained. West said it was a long-standing order which he had decided to enforce rigidly.

Girl, 6, Hurt Critically in 40-Foot Fall

Ever since their summer vacation began, 6-year-old Pamela Smithies and 6-year-old Pamela Ridgeway have been meeting daily for lunch at a bench in the playground at McLean Gardens.

Yesterday tragedy interrupted the daily event. The two little girls were waiting on the second story stair landing outside of Pamela Smithies' apartment, while her mother prepared her lunch, when Pamela Smithies suddenly fell through a window on the landing about 40 feet to a concrete pavement below.

Last night, the little girl was in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital with possible internal injuries and a skull fracture.

Her mother, who was only 10 feet away in the kitchen of the Smithies' apartment at 3940 Langley ct., when the accident occurred, was unable to tell police whether the child had opened the screen on the window of the landing herself or whether it had been opened before she went out on the landing.

Frightened little Pamela Ridgeway, who lives several doors away at 3960 Langley ct., didn't know either, police said.

Pamela Smithies is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smithies. He is director of the Fiscal Trade Policy Division of the Budget Bureau. They have one other child, an 11-year-old son.

Devereux Retired; Hero Will Take It Easy on Farm

Brig. Gen. James P. S. Devereux, Wake Island hero promoted from the rank of colonel and retired yesterday, plans to take things easy on his Maryland farm for a while.

The Marine leader in the last-ditch defense of the small Pacific base said: "I have no immediate plans for the future. However, I am going to do a bit of farming."

Devereux, who requested his retirement after 25 years of duty, has been living for the last two years on his farm in Green Spring Valley, Baltimore County.

He retired immediately after he was sworn in as a one-star general in the Baltimore Marine recruiting office.

Traffic Chief Acts to Speed Road Tests

Keneipp Assigns More Inspectors to Give Exams to Motorists

An emergency measure to handle an unusually large number of applications for District drivers licenses will go into effect today.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said several inspectors have been transferred temporarily from District automobile inspection stations to the drivers' examination division to help give road tests. They will continue at this job as long as they are needed.

The action was taken after numerous persons complained because they had to wait hours to take their tests. Some complained because they had to return a second day before examiners got around to them, he said.

The emergency was brought about partly by the absence of three of the regular examiners. Two are on sick leave and the third is on vacation, Keneipp said.

A road test can be given in about 12 minutes, if there are no difficulties. Last month with the full crew working, three on the written examinations and five on road tests, an average of 127 tests were given daily.

New District Directory Coming Soon

R. L. Polk & Co., of Richmond, publishers, announced yesterday that copies of the new edition—first since 1943—are en route here from Detroit and should be arriving within a few days. They'll sell for $65.

The book will boast 5992 more names than the last edition—just a drop in the bucket compared with the 1941 increase of 36,936. It will be longer and thinner in shape than last time but hardly pocket size, like the first edition in 1822.

The volume will also show a new title, "Polk's Washington City Directory" in lieu of "Boyd's District of Columbia Directory." Although the Polk firm has published the book since 1905, the Boyd name was used until this year.

There are 1736 pages, containing four columns instead of three, and 543,176 names. Some 844 different business enterprises are listed.

The preface contains a new story of Washington prepared by the Board of Trade here. It includes a Washington postal zone guide. All homes and business establishments with telephones are designated by symbol.

Six Forfeit $25 Each on Bet Charges

2 Men and Women Held in Bond After Raid on Restaurant

Six persons accused of placing horse bets in a restaurant here were allowed to forfeit $25 collateral each yesterday in Municipal Court.

They were arrested in a raid Saturday afternoon at Walsh's Restaurant, 3432 14th st. nw. A policeman said he saw the defendants placing bets with Frank E. Baker, 41, of 3411 14th st. nw., who went from booth to booth contacting the bettors. Baker was charged with setting up a gaming table and placed under $2000 bond for a hearing August 25.

Walter S. Hilleary, 27, of 1446 Fairmont st., and Marjorie M. Van Horn, 34, of 3306 Holmead st. nw., were held under $500 bond each for trial August 25 on a charge of permitting gaming at the restaurant.

The horse-betting collateral forfeitures were entered against Michael Flaherty, 77, of 1333 Park rd. nw.; Albert A. Bichell, 39, of 3439 14th st. nw.; Jack F. Holmes, 40, of 1400 Meridian pl. nw.; Richard H. Corcoran, 40, of 2536 14th st. nw.; Robert J. Carroll, 58, fo 3104 Bunker Hill rd., Mount Rainier, Md., and Charles J. Bernier, 53, of the U. S. Soldiers Home.

5 Blood Donors Are Needed for Blind Newsman

George Grosvenor Dawe, partially blind octogenarian and veteran newspaper columnist, author and lecturer, last night was reported in need of at least four pints of blood to undergo a major abdominal operation at Georgetown University Hospital on Friday.

Dawe, 85, a resident of the Henry and Annie Hurt Horne for the Blind, 3050 R st. nw., needs blood transfusions from about five persons today and Friday. Hospital officials said the transfusions are needed to "build him up" and to see him through the operation.

Donors of "any blood type" are requested to go to the Red Cross Blood Bank, 1730 E st. nw., between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. The Red Cross will supply the hospital with Dawe's blood type in bank reserves as soon as donors contribute to the bank, the hospital reported.

CORRECTION

A lecture by Jacques Guerin-Desjardins, French social service worker, was held last night at the parish hall of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square. The Washington Post yesterday reported the lecture would be held tonight. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Model Railroaders Build Boom Town

Men from all walks of life with one common denominator—they never outgrew youthful fascination for railroads—have built a boom town—in a fourth-floor room at Union Station.

Their community is Crown Point and environs, a make-believe railroad terminus, real to the most minuscule detail.

Without a serious accident, they sent the Metropolitan Southern Railroad, scaled one-fourth inch to the foot, and the Metropolitan Eastern, scaled one-eighth inch to the foot, rolling through precipitous mountain terrain.

Slow freights chugged and crack passenger expresses — replete to knives and forks on tables in diners—whipped along more than 300 feet of track, disappearing into realistic tunnels, then winding along picturesque countryside.

From a 10-foot long freight yard, adjoining Crown Point, the railroad network branches out over carefully planned terrain extending 22 feet in length and 11 feet in width.

Coal deposits have been discovered in the mountains; oil derricks are rising in the hills and lumber yards are in the making. The town of Interchange soon will serve as a center for transferring freight to the railroad's mountain division. Special powerful engines will drag freight up the steep grades. Any day now, water will fill the sheet-lead lined river bed and lake.

The scenery, complete to no hunting signs, was constructed of screen wire and plastic paint, on a wooden base, under direction of Al Schutz, District maintenance engineer, of 4719 MacArthur blvd.

More than four miles of wire already have been strung for controls. Eventually a dozen engines will be operated simultaneously under independent control. A 14-inch turntable for engines is being built, as are trolley lines to connect Crown Point with Shanty-Town, Stonehaven, and Royston.

When will the network be completed?

Well, a model railroad is never complete, but "the appearance" will be completed in about a year, advises Ed Henderer, District engineer, of 400 Beech ave., Takoma Park, the club's president.

Area News in Brief

Speeder Is Trapped By Telephone Call

A 34-year-old crane operator was in jail yesterday following a 2-mile auto chase which police said reached 90 miles an hour at times.

Pursuit of the man, Robert S. Wilkerson, of no fixed address, began when shortly after 3 a. m. he drove up to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong, 45, of 1601 Montello ave. ne., and saw police waiting for him.

WILKERSON

Police Pvts. H. C. Womble and R. R. Swank, unable to block Wilkerson's flight, took after him. Then in response to a radio call from Womble and Swank, three other scout cars, a motorcycle policeman, a patrol-wagon and a radio-equipped Yellow Cab joined in pursuit.

Wilkerson eluded his pursuers at 14th and Franklin sts. ne. Police, however, stationed a man inside Mrs. Armstrong's home, and shortly after 4 a. m. she received another telephone call from Wilkerson, telling her he was in a lunchroom and gave the address. While she engaged him in conversation, police went there and arrested him.

In Municipal Court yesterday Wilkerson admitted to Judge Armand Scott that he had telephoned Mrs. Armstrong, but denied threatening her. He said he loved her.

Judge Scott found him guilty on a charge of making threats, but suspended execution of the sentence.

For traffic violations Wilkerson received the following sentences: $50 or 30 days for speeding; $5 or five days for driving over a sidewalk; $10 or 10 days on each of two charges of driving through a stop sign; $25 or 30 days for driving without a permit. Unable to pay the fines, totaling $90, he remained in jail.

Scholarship for D. C. Boy

Robert L. Cave, jr., 17, of 4610 8th st. nw., has been selected as one of 27 high school students throughout the country to receive four-year scholarships in the Naval ROTC at the University of Mississippi.

Comdr. Ralph Semmes, jr., associate professor of the University's naval science program, said the former Roosevelt High School student will receive a four-year college education with all expenses paid by the Government.

Horseshoe Jewelry

Costume jewelry made from shoes worn by noted race horses will be among the displays at the Public Building Administration hobby show to be held Monday in the basement of the Interior Department Building.

The jewelry was made by Mrs. Morie Finkel, 2515 K st., nw., a native of Kentucky. Horse-breeders in that State have presented her with shoes worn by Man O' War and other famed thoroughbreds.

Other exhibits will include a collection of more than 200 miniature China dogs collected by Mrs. Grace Stanton Lester, 1763 Lyman pl. ne., and musical instruments carved by Buford Hammond, a PBA carpenter, of 1132 8th st., nw.

Vacation Robberies

Approximately 24 homes in the Silver Spring area have been broken into during the past month while occupants were away on vacation, police reported yesterday.

Pointing out that an accumulation of newspapers on front porches is an open invitation to housebreakers, police urged homeowners to take all proper precautions. This includes notifying police when you are going on vacation, they said.

2 Chest Aides Named

Residential chairmen for the Community Chest campaign in the two Suburban areas of Montgomery County were announced yesterday by William D. Blair, county campaign chairman.

Heading the Silver Spring-Takoma Park drive will be Mrs. James E. Daly, 8327 16th st., Silver Spring. In charge of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area will be Mrs. P. C. Alexander, 502 Maple ave., Bethesda.

Held in Morals Case

Dallas C. Williford, 48, a butcher, was held for action of the District grand jury yesterday on a charge of indecent assault upon his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Bond was set by Judge Armond Scott of Municipal Court at $10,000. If tried and convicted, Williford faces a prison term up to 10 years.

According to testimony in Municipal Court, Williford persisted in fondling the girl indecently despite her screams. The high bond was set after Assistant United States Attorney Robert Short said that another case against Williford, charging similar assault on his 14-year-old stepdaughter would be presented to the grand jury.

Two indecent exposure cases were continued. Charged in these cases were Elmer L. Maxton, 46, of 1725 17th st. nw., placed under $300 bond for trial August 21 Herbert D. Bazam, 29, of 4622 43d st. nw., under $500 bond for hearing August 19.

Deadline for Dogs

Friday is the last day to get dogs vaccinated against rabies in the current Health Department immunization program, the department warned District residents yesterday.

The 12 stations for immunization of dogs, required by District law, will be open from 4 to 6 p.m. In event of rain by 3:30 p.m., they will be closed. The stations are not open today, but will be Friday.

Dr. R. R. Ashworth, chief veterinarian, estimated yesterday that about 500 more dogs would be vaccinated this year than last. In 1947 approximately 23,000 dogs were vaccinated, including 10,000 by private veterinarians.

2d Workshop Set for Today At Rockville

The second of a series of "workshops" between Montgomery County teachers and parents will be held today at 1:30 p. m. in Richard Montgomery High School at Rockville.

Aimed at possible curriculum revisions, the workshop today will feature separate committee meetings in which parents will be invited to participate.

Curriculum subjects to be discussed by the various committees will include health, arithmetic, reading and literature, language, science, music, physical education, writing, geography, history, citizenship, spelling and art.

For parents unable to attend today's session, a similar conference will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the same school. A final conference of the month-long workshop in which parents may participate will be held August 24 and 25.

Washington Guard Unit Is Nosed Out In Dover Gunnery

Washington's 121st "White House" squadron was nosed out of the lead of the aerial gunnery competition yesterday at the Air National Guard encampment at Dover, Del.

The District's shooters, posting a 5.66 percentage of hits, were topped by the 148th Fighter Squadron from Reading, Pa., which scored an average of 5.79. However, the District unit still led in total number of hits, 1190 in 21,017 attempts, as against 772 for Reading in 13,343 attempts.

Members of the District unit will return to Andrews Field Saturday afternoon when the encampment closes.

1000 Pledge Garment Each As Child Aid

Nearly 1000 students at the Summer School of Catholic Action yesterday pledged a new garment each for suffering children in war-devasted areas.

The pledge followed an address by Miss Dorothy J. Willmann of St. Louis, Mo., a member of the faculty of the school, being held on Catholic University campus, and of the International Federation of Catholic Youth executive board.

Miss Willman, speaking at a "town meeting" session, described her visits to orphanages in Italy and the congress of the federation in Rome, attended by representatives of 40 nations.

The Children in Need campaign is being sponsored by the National Council of Catholic Women through Catholic War Relief Services.

The clothing is to be given to the Pope on September 8, anniversary of the birth of the Mother of Christ. Miss Willmann said the Pope receives at least 1000 appeals for help each day.

At another session the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., of St. Louis, led a discussion of jobs and careers for young people.

The Rev. Arthur R. McGratty, S. J., of New York, national organizer for the Apostleship of Prayer, will discuss its program today. During World War II he served as a Navy chaplain with the Eighth Marine Regiment in the Pacific.

The school ends Saturday.

2 Boys Hurt In Area Traffic Accidents

Two children were injured in traffic accidents in Greater Washington yesterday.

Four persons, all named King, only two of whom were related, were involved in a traffic accident which resulted in 5-year-old Donald L. King suffering a possible skull fracture.

The lad, who lives, at 1218 31st st. nw., was struck by a car driven by William King, 25, of 3114 N st. nw., at 5:15 p. m. as he attempted to run across the street in front of 1231 31st st. nw.

In the car with King at the time was his father LeRoy O. King of the N st. address. Sent to investigate the accident was Police Pvt. Earl B. King.

A 5-year-old Gaithersburg, Md., boy, Ronnie Cubitt, suffered a broken arm when he walked into the side of a moving automobile in front of his home. He was admitted to Suburban Hospital.

Police listed the driver of the car as Dr. T. J. Collier, a Hot Springs, Ark., physician. He estimated his speed at between 20 and 25 miles per hour. No charges were placed.

Lewis S. Lipscombe, 27, 1111 21st st. ne., a driver for a local slaughterhouse, suffered head and facial injuries late Tuesday when his truck went out of control and crashed into an abutment on Route 1 a mile south of Richmond, Va.

Lipscombe was delivering a 5000-pound load of veal to the Army Quartermaster Depot at Richmond for the James B. Gilbert slaughterhouse when the accident occurred.

Lipscombe was treated at St. Phillip's Hospital, Richmond.

Patients at Former St. Louis Clinic Hold Reunion Here

Nearly 70 strong despite their canes and crutches, members of the McLain Club from 20 States are holding their biennial convention at the Continental Hotel.

Victims of infantile paralysis, arthritis, Pott's disease and other misfortunes, they have a bond in common—they all receive treatment at the former McLain Orthopedic clinic in St. Louis.

"It is like a college reunion," C. T. Hayes of 3333 N st. nw., explained last night at the organization's dinner in the hotel. Hayes, cashier and part owner of a bottling company, was a founder and first president of the club.

For Own Amusement

"People would be at the clinic six months or longer, and naturally would get to know each other," he said. "When I was there a group of us would give entertainments both for our own amusement and for the children at the sanitarium.

"After our time was up some of us decided to keep up the fellowship as an alumni association," he said, "and hold a reunion."

Their first attempt was in St. Louis in 1927, he said, and five persons came. Since then the organization has grown to about 250 active memberships. As the clinic itself went out of existence about 10 years ago, there can be no new "young blood."

In the beginning the organization was planned to be inspirational with one handicapped person showing the others what he had done to help himself, Hayes said, but over the years it has become more of a social organization with women outnumbering men 3 to 1.

Active in Many Lines

Many of the women are teachers, others stenographic workers. One man is a university chemistry professor, another an insurance man, another a certified public accountant. A girl from Cleveland is the sole owner and operator of a coal company in which she started as a bookkeeper, and another from Covington, Ky., is a pianist with an orchestra.

William P. McCahill, secretary to the chairman of the President's Committee on "Employ the Physically Handicapped" spoke briefly last night, and members provided entertainment.

The club, of which Charles Rickert of Union City, Ind., is president, will elect new officers today at one of the week's four business sessions. The reunion will end Saturday.

Claude Thomas Hutton

Claude Thomas Hutton, 48, of 11 Nicholson st. nw., owner of the Wootton Refuse Co. at Silver Spring, Md., died yesterday at George Washington University Hospital following a brief illness.

Mr. Hutton, a native of Sugar Grove, Va., had lived in Washington and Montgomery County, Md., for 31 years. Before taking over the Wootton Refuse Co., about five years ago he was engaged in the insurance business for a time and had lived in Bethesda, Md.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Hattie Hutton; four sisters, Mrs. Maggie Dutton of Staunton, Va.; Mrs. Vergie Haulsee, Sugar Grove; Mrs. Mary Lou Hegeman, Rockville, Md., and Mrs. Mabel Merson, Bethesda, and a brother, James H. Hutton of Bridgeville, Del.

Funeral services will be held at the William Reuben Pumphrey funeral chapel, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, at 11 a. m. Friday. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Timberlake's Long Career Reaches '30'

The symbol "30," which telegraphers use to mark the end of a newspaper story, was written last night to the career of Julian E. Timberlake, 57, after nearly 40 years of service sending stories over the wires.

Mr. Timberlake, who had been associated with Postal Teleghaph and Western Union for the major part of his life, died at 8 p. m. yesterday at his home 1325 Quincy st. nw., after a long illness. Death was caused by a malignant throat tumor.

Born in Staunton, Va., Mr. Timberlake was brought to Washington as a child and attended public schools here.

In his work, he handled many of the major news stories of the last four decades, keeping the keys clicking with reporters' copy.

He handled the Snyder-Gray murder case of some 20 years ago and was present at the ringside during World Serise games and many championship prize fights. He knew intimately innumerable celebrities of the sports and newspaper world.

Surviving him are his wife, Nathalie, two sons, George Timberlake, Arlington, and Julian Timberlake, jr., of Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. Nathalie Wheeler, Washington, and Mrs. Jane Zukowski of New York City.

Funeral services have not yet been arranged.

Mrs. Harry A. Cummins

Mrs. Harry A. Cummins, 73, wife of a retired Postoffice employe, died yesterday at her home, 2811 38th st. nw. A native of Washington, she was the former Anna Marie King.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Harley H. Cummins of Washington; two sisters, Mrs. Doris C. Brodt of Washington and Mrs. Elsie C. Gulick of Fairlington, and a sister, Mrs. Helen Moye of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Friday at Chevy Chase funeral home. Burial will be private.

Travers B. Pinn

Funeral services for Travers B. Pinn, 74, retired General Accounting Office messenger, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the home, 1814 13th st. nw. Burial will be in Lincoln Memorial Cemetery. Mr. Pinn died Monday.

A native of Alexandria, he retired from the Government four years ago after more than 35 years of service.

He was a member of the Columbia Air Society, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District, and the Northwest Citizens Association.

He leaves his wife, Sarah S. Pinn, and a daughter, Mrs. Edith De Bruhl.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—Dr. Robert Murray Christian, 39, associate professor of history at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, died this afternoon at his home here. He had been in poor health for some time.

Dr. Christian was born November 17, 1908, in Mobile, Ala.

Mrs. Mason, Wife of Patent Attorney, Dies

Mrs. Eugene G. Mason, 77, wife of a patent attorney, died yesterday at her home, 1835 Lamont st. nw., after an illness of several months.

A native of Fredonia, N. Y., and a graduate of the New York State Teachers College there, Mrs. Mason had lived in Washington since 1896, when she came here following her marriage. She was for many years an active member of the Calvary Baptist Church and was a former president of both the Women's Missionary Society of the church and the Baptist Home for Children here.

She also was a sustaining member of the YWCA.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Mason is survived by a son, Laurence S. Mason, Prescott, Ariz.; a sister, Mrs. Minnie S. Mason, and a brother, Frank L. Sackett, both of Fredonia, and one granddaughter, Mrs. Jean M. Hackney, Tucson, Ariz.

Her funeral will be held Saturday at 3 p. m. from the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Fredonia.

Mrs. Dorothy L. Talkes

Mrs. Dorothy L. Talkes, 69, widow of Stephen H. Talkes, secretary-treasurer of the Associated Retail Credit Men, Inc., of Washington, prior to his death in 1935, died Tuesday at Doctor's Hospital after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. Talkes came to this country when she was quite young after her family moved from Germany, where she was born. As the former Miss Dorothy L. Magnus, she was married to Mr. Talkes in San Francisco, Calif., in 1903. Mrs. Talkes lived in Cleveland, Ohio, before she and her husband came to Washington over 40 years ago. She lived at 1342 Ingraham st. nw.

She was a member of the Bethlehem Chapter, No. 7, of the Order of the Eastern Star and the District Loyal Ladies of the Royal Arcanum.

Mrs. Talkes is survived by a son, Wayne N. Talkes, 8403 Woodcliff ct., Silver Spring, Md., auditor for The Hecht Co.; a sister, Mrs. George Wendt of Leonia, N. J., and a brother, Rudolph Magnus of Hoboken, N. J.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 1 p. m. at the W. W. Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia ave. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Rites Today For Delaney, 1898 Veteran

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. today at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, 16th st. and Park rd. nw., for William J. Delaney, 75, retired Interior Department employe, who died Monday at his home, 1359 Oak st. nw.

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery, where graveside services will be conducted by the Gen. Nelson Miles Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, of which he was a member.

A native of Ireland, Mr. Delaney came to this country in 1891, and had lived in Washington since 1898. During the Spanish-American War he served as a fireman aboard the battleship Indiana and saw service in Puerto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines.

He retired from the Interior Department about 10 years ago after more than 20 years in the office of land utilization.

Mr. Delaney is survived by two brothers, Patrick and Peter Delaney, both of Kildare, Ireland, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Caffery, of Dublin. Members of his family in this country are a nephew, the Rev. John P. Delaney, S. J., of Baltimore, and a niece, Sister Anna Mary, of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament in New Orleans.

Crittenbergers Feted At Colorful Reception

By Marie McNair

GEN. WILLIS D. CRITTENBERGER pinned all his ribbons to the tunic of his starched white uniform and pretty Mrs. Crittenberger donned a powder blue crepe frock and pinned an orchid to her shoulder to be guests of honor at the Inter-American Defense Board's reception yesterday afternoon at the Carlton.

The general, white thatched, tall and straight, is the new chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board. He'll be coming to Washington twice a month for meetings of the group, but he'll continue to remain in New York, where he is on duty as senior United States Army member, Military Staff Committee of United Nations.

Thirty-five years in the Army, General Crittenberger has seen service pretty much all over the world. He started out in Texas, member of the Third Cavalry, and from a hard riding Cavalry officer he went on to become the first Chief of Staff of the newly organized First Armored Division, and then to command the Second Armored—"Hel. on Wheels"—Division at Fort Benning.

He had the satisfaction, after 401 days of bitter fighting, of receiving the unconditional surrender of the German Ligurian Army in 1945, which marked the beginning of the German collapse in Italy. In Panama, where he became commander in chief of the Caribbean command, he met and became warm friends with many of the Latin-American military men on their journeys over the cross-roads of the world.

Uniforms and Prints

Every man was in uniform yesterday, the ladies in bright summery prints and pastels.

General and Mrs. Crittenberger and Air Brig. Gen. Ivan Carpenter and Mrs. Carpenter stood together to welcome the guests. General Carpenter's Air Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and chairman of the social committee of the defense board.

Without question, the biggest man in the room was Lieut. Gen. Carlos von der Becke of Argentina, wearing a gold-braided white tunic and dark trousers. Mme. von der Becke, like Mme. Carpenter, had chosen all white, with heavy gold jangling bracelets and clips.

Mrs. Crittenberger was keeping an eye out for her son, Col. Willis Crittenberger, and his bride, who were married a few weeks ago at Fort Jackson, S. C. They finally arrived after the storm subsided, young Mrs. Crittenberger in a print frock and wide, black hat.

Others there were Rear Admiral and Mme. Monteiro Ache of Brazil; Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Leobardo C. Ruiz of Mexico, Rear Admiral O. B. Hardison, who arrived without his wife; Brig. Gen. L. Mathewson, coordinator of the defense board, and Mrs. Mathewson.

Pretty Gowns

Maj. Juan Rodriguez, Military Attache of the Nicaraguan Embassy, brought along Senora de Rodriguez, who wore a quaint frock of plaid taffeta in green and blue. One of the prettiest gowns in the room was the ankle-length delicate black lace over white satin worn by Senora de Quintero, wife of the Military Attache of the Panama Embassy. A brimmed hat of the same lace sat atop her golden curls.

Then there were Jose Vallarino of the defense board secretariat and Senora de Vallarino; Lieut. Comdr. Ernesto Jochamowitz of Peru and Senora de Jochamowitz, who matched her fuchsia gloves to her hat; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Andrew Gordon, Lieut. Col. and Senora Delgado Mosquera of Ecuador; Brig. Gen. and Senora Danilo Bassi of Chile; Col. and Mrs. Astrel Roland of Haiti; Col. and Senora Carlos Bobeda of Paraguay; Brig. Gen. and Senora Francisco Tamayo of Colombia; Col. Douglas B. Smith, secretary of the Inter-American Defense Board, and Mrs. Smith; Capt. and Senora Juan Carlos Deambrosio of Uruguay; Brig. Gen. and Senora Alfredo Sanches of Bolivia and Col. and Senora Salvador Bercian of Guatemala.

'Daring' Editor Visited Georgetown Row House Opposite Police Station

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE ARE overtones galore at the House Committee on Un-American Activities investigation. Take, for instance the statement by Whittaker Chambers a senior editor of Time Magazine that a wartime visit to the Washington home of Alger Hiss was undertaken at great personal risk.

Unknowing listeners immediately conjure a picture of Hiss living behind a barricade of machine guns, concealed guards, ferocious unleashed dogs in a spot similar to that old "castle" on Meridian Hill. Actually, nothing could be further from the truth.

During the period mentioned by Chambers, the Alger Hisses were installed in a newly built stucco house, one in a row of similar design, in Georgetown's Volta Place. Windows opened on the street; it is practically opposite the Volta Place police station, and, with due respect to the builders, anyone talking in a slightly raised voice can be heard distinctly in the adjoining houses.

Saddest remark in the whole sorry spectacle was made by Hiss after Congressman Mundt voiced appreciation of his testimony. "Denials," said Hiss, "seldom catch up with charges."

Every now and then there's a legitimate laugh. Congressman Mundt asked Hiss if he remembered Chambers, knew what he looked like. Hiss replied he had never laid eyes on Chambers but had been looking at his picture for days in the newspapers. Then Mundt produced a photograph. Hiss replied approximately "He looks like a lot of people. I might even mistake him for the chairman of this committee."

When the "audience" roared with laughter, Hiss, who is a really serious minded man, said he meant nothing funny. But the truth is the photograph of Chambers does look a lot like Congressman Mundt.

As we have said, Alger Hiss is serious minded, intellectual. It is hard to dig up anything humorous about him. The Claridge rat story is all this department could find. During some sort of conference, Hiss and several State Department men were billeted at Claridge's, London's most socially posh hotel. One foggy day a rat scampered through the room. Hiss reported this distressing fact to the manager.

"No rat has ever been seen in Claridge's," the factotum replied snootily. "You must be mistaken."

The following foggy day the unfortunate rat slipped into the bath tub, couldn't get out. Hiss summoned the manager. He looked superciliously at the rodent.

"That's not a Claridge rat," he remarked with poised hauteur "it must have come from another hotel across the street!"

Girls' Nation Attends Spy Hearings, Hears Wiley, Mundt Attack Communism

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE United States will be plagued with "subversive troubles until we have a law which makes it a crime to appoint a Communist to a Government position and for a Communist to accept one." So declared Senator Alexander F. Wiley of Wisconsin in an informal talk yesterday before the 94 delegates to Girls' Nation. The teen-agers, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, are conducting a five-day government school here.

At the same early morning session held in the new House Office Building, Representative Karl Mundt, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, told the group of teen-agers, "if you do nothing else, make it clear to the folks back home that when the general public takes it easy the sneak thieves of poisoned philosophies get busy."

Referring to the current hearings before the Un-American Activities Committee, the South Dakota Representative said that from committee hearings "we have learned that during the war many in high positions of responsibility, even some in uniform, thought so little of the American way that they lent a kindly ear to communism and refused to deny under oath their Communist allegiance for fear of perjuring themselves. We know too that important secret information was given out by Americans, and this has been confirmed all along the way."

Representative Mundt pointed out that it is difficult to get written evidence, "because the Communist Party does not keep written records of those who serve in high places."

"We will not have peace in the world until we check communism," he concluded.

Educational Lack

Senator Wiley told the Girls' Nation delegates that "education can be as cockeyed as anything. Miss Elizabeth Bentley had two degrees—but she was not educated because she became an operator in a spy ring."

The Senator said Miss Bentley knew nothing about our form of government's check and balance system. He reminded his youthful audience, composed of high school leaders from 47 States, that America has become the vortex of all types of political currents and that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Following the talks by Senator Wiley and Representative Mundt, the delegates went in a body to listen to the hearings of the Un-American Activities Committee. And when Miss Elizabeth Bentley, self-confessed spy for the Communists, took the stand to testify, the delegation arose in spontaneous unison in order to get a better glimpse of her. Originally, the girls had scheduled an installation ceremony in the hearings room but had to forego the spot because of the hearings. Instead they were given a block of reserved seats as a compromise.

President Installed

Prior to the hearings, in the Ways and Committee Room, Miss Kennon Kethley of McAllen, Tex., was installed president of the Second Girls Nation.

Others taking the oath of office included Alice Jean Wright, Chillicothe, Mo., vice president; Peggy Whitaker of Springfield, Ohio, Secretary of State; Fay Moreland of Baton Rouge, La., Secretary of the Treasury; Mary Vane Marshall of Tallahassee, Fla., Secretary of Defense; Nancy Carol Colton of Verneal, Utah, Secretary of Agriculture; Patricia Ripley of Radford, Va., Secretary of Labor; Norma Byers of Rhode Island, Secretary of the Interior; Caroline Starkey of Oklahoma, Attorney General; Karen Stalcup, Phaenix, Ariz., Secretary of Commerce; Connie Cameron of Idaho, Postmaster General.

During the afternoon the girls toured the F. B. I., returned to their headquarters at American University for dinner and a dance.

The Girls' Nation will conclude its five-day study of the Federal Government this morning with ceremonies at the university, when principal speaker will be Mrs. Lee W. Hutton, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary. Graduation certificates will be presented by Mrs. E. A. Campbell, national chairman of Girls' Nation.

The Pert Princess

Margaret Rose's Sauciness Delights Her British Public

By Bob Considine

London, Aug. 11 (INS).—The real darling of Britain is no movie queen or Olympic champ. She is Princess Margaret Rose. The people have taken her to their hearts in a way that is difficult for an American to understand. But it's true and warming when you hear these people speak of her.

The pictures we've seen of her back in the States are misleading. She's startlingly tiny. The average sized blokes she likes to dance with, at such places as the marky, red-plush 400 Club, loom over her like a giant over a child.

The thing about her that appeals to the battered British is her sauciness. Probably, once upon a time not so long ago, her antics would have brought down considerable parental wrath upon anyone in her position, and certainly would not have been mentioned in the public prints.

But the British papers gleefully and proudly report where she was the night before with whom, how she fared and sometimes what she said. Your cab driver will turn around to you and say, with feeling, "She's a live one, that Margaret Rose. Full of mischief," and then turn back about the business of driving in the most bewildering city in the world.

Because she is not yet of age, as princesses go, she is not permitted to wear make-up. But at the 400 the other night she was well made-up. The papers have dutifully reported that she waits until the oldsters turn in, and her somewhat stern older sister isn't looking, and then dips into the pancake, rouge, eyebrow pencil and war-paint.

Recently the King and Queen told her that they had been overly lenient with her and that she positively could not go with them to the Ascot race meeting because of her age. She looked forlorn for a moment, then swallowed her disappointment (apparently) and bade them goodby.

She let them get an hour's start, then climbed into her sauciest outfit, made herself up, called one of the palace cars and drove off to the track in style. Without batting an eyelash she walked into the royal box, knowing they wouldn't dare bawl her out in front of the crowd and placidly took her seat.

Heim Shows Courtship Clothes for Teen-Agers

Paris, Aug. 11 (AP).—Jacques Heim's fall fashions for teen-agers accentuate casual easy-to-wear clothes for the junior miss. With a keen eye on what the "grown-ups" are favoring this season, Jacques Heim has designed clothes without exaggerating hip or bust contours.

His show was a complete education in French courtship, taking the audience through the perambulations of a teen-ager from the dress she is wearing when she meets her beau at a cocktail party, subsequently getting engaged, and finally married.

Day dresses have fullness swept to the back with youthful Peter Pan collars and cuffed sleeves.

An Alice blue soft wool dress had 3-inch-wide horizontal bands encircling the upper hips and running into full vertical panels at the back. He uses the same movement for an evening gown of rose satin which had an off-shoulder gather collar.

A pretty ankle-length gray faille dinner dress came with three deep-tiered flounces. Realistic-looking roses nestled in the softly-draped deepcut devollete. A pure-white taffeta pin-dotted dance dress had a draped dropped hipline, which finished in two gathered-back panels caught with tiny bows. The front bodice was high, drapey, falling very low at the back.

The Heim wedding gown was of ivory moire and had a strictly 1948 draping looped from the front waist around below the knee at the back. The wedding cap was a white velvet cloche edged with orange blossoms. Yards and yards of white tulle billowed from the hat and double-purposed as a bri[illegible] train.

Good Posture Is Result Of Exercise and Habit

Starlet Ann Blyth is sitting pretty as a result of habitual good posture. Exercising to tone the middle muscles and the constant up-pull habit have aided her in keeping the tall slim line. Good posture not only gives a girl a physical lift but a mental lift as well

By Ida Jean Kain

When a woman looks in the mirror she seldom sees anything wrong with the way she stands. Why? Well, naturally she wants to look on the bright side, so unconsciously she spruces up her posture before she takes a good look! Then she is deluded into believing that this is her habitual posture. This invariably happens in a fitting room. She will draw herself up to her regal height and feel that she looks quite slim . . . and so she takes the dress.

That may be a slight exaggeration, but it's not too far off. Or sometimes when she takes a quick look and is caught unawares, she promptly yanks in the offending stomach. But with the next breath it's out again—and obviously she can't stop breathing!

That erroneous idea that the stomach should be held in is back of many a bad posture. Change the word in to UP and you'll make more progress. But even so, if the up-pull lasts only as long as you look in the mirror, more tone in the middle muscles is needed. Exercise is the toner, and they can be easy ones . . .

Exercises of this kind are richly rewarding. Putting tone in the muscles that form the abdominal wall has a whole chain of good effects. Systematic functioning improves which brings a mental and physical lift, and these exercises also work wonders on the figger.

To counteract gravity, get an up-and-in pull achieved through this creeping exercise . . .

Position: On hands and knees, muscles of abdominal wall held up and in snugly so small of back does not sink in.

Movement: Creep by pushing forward with one knee and opposite hand, turning head and neck to the side of the advancing knee. This is "active" exercise, without strain, and may be continued for as long as the snug abdominal up-pull can be held. Follow with the "rest" position, lying on back, hugging knees to chest, stomach muscles pulled strongly up.

To get the right line-up, try this exercise . . .

Position: Standing, palms of hands on top of head, fingers interlocked. Chest up, head back, abdominal muscles contracted firmly, hips tucked snugly under.

Movement: Keep fingers interlocked, turn palms upward, and stretch arms overhead, holding them close to ears. Then with elbows straight, pull arms backward. Now relax, letting the body drop forward. Repeat a half dozen times.

But habitual good posture is the only exercise that is lasting. Get the up-pull habit, and your posture will be quite all right . . . even when you're not looking in the mirror.

Send Self-addressed, stamped envelope to The Washington Post for Ida Jean Kain's Summer Slimming Diet.

She Has 20,000 Buttons to Match? Ask Mrs. Bauder

Fort Collins, Colo.—Mrs. G. W. Bauder of Fort Collins figures she has at least 10,000 buttons strung on long cords and they are only about half her collection. She has given up counting, figuring that 20,000 is a reasonable figure for less than 10 years of collecting, and goes on gathering buttons.

Mrs. Bauder, who admits to being nearly 100 years old, has been bagging buttons as a hobby only since 1939. Previously she kept only those she considered particularly interesting.

Among her prized buttons are some once worn by Calamity Jane. Mrs. Bauder knew the colorful character when she lived at Deadwood, S. Dak. She is a native of Switzerland and settled in this country with her parents in 1850. In 1885, she married Bauder at Deadwood. They moved to Fort Collins 42 years ago. He died a number of years ago.

The Bauder buttons include wood, rubber and stone. Some of them are hundreds of years old. Special numbers are from Switzerland and Panama.

There are dozens of large cards filled with buttons, neatly sewed on and identified. Unusual buttons are kept in small boxes. The collection includes campaign buttons, one of them for Lincoln.

Ask Anne About Restaurant Tipping

Is it proper for the guest or the hostess to pay the tip at a restaurant dinner? E. F.

The hostess usually pays the tip. However, if a woman friend you know well is taking you to dinner, it's all right to say, "Why don't you let me take care of the tip?" if you want to make some small contribution or save her the trouble of trying to find the right change.

I have an old white leather lounge chair which has become soiled. I have tried cleaning it with saddle soap but the results are not very successful. Is there any kind of paint on the market that can be used on leather? Would slip covers be practical over a leather chair? W. A.

A plastic coating for use on leather is sold by a local firm, which can be reached by telephoning District 1130. This coating comes in white and colors. Slip covers are sometimes used on leather chairs. If the chair is made so that the cover can be anchored well they are satisfactory. However, with some chairs you get a "slippery" effect that is quite annoying.

I have a beautiful white Irish linen (Mosaic work) tablecloth, 3½ yards long, with 12 large dinner napkins to match. I would like to sell the set, which is in perfect condition and has only been used once. I priced a similar set in one of Washington's stores and it was $200. Have you any idea where I could sell the set? H. N. T.

A shop in Alexandria handles "not-new" items of this type and endeavers to get the price that the buyer sets on them. A 20 per cent commission is charged for selling the articles. The shop can be contacted by telephoning Alexandria 0649. Another idea would be to advertise the cloth and napkins in the classified columns of The Washington Post.

Can you tell me where I can safely send a valuable white silk shawl to have it bleached? It has become dark from having been packed away a long time. W. M. R.

One local firm that does bleaching work on fine materials can be reached by telephoning North 0632 and another by telephoning Shepherd 2330. The first place is located in the 1700 block of Connecticut ave. and the second, in Silver Spring. Both would have to examine the scarf before they could tell you positively how good a bleaching job could be done on it.

We bought one of those Army double-deck surplus beds and would like to do it over to match our son's chifforobe, which is a dark, waxed birch, almost the shade of maple. Can this be done? If so, how? A. L. S.

You do not say whether this is a metal or wooden bed, but I infer from your other remarks that it is made of wood. First step would be to take off the old finish with paint and varnish remover, scraper and sandpaper. The next step depends on the sort of wood you find beneath the old finish. It may be sufficiently close in color to simply finish the bed with a couple of coats of spar varnish. Let the first coat dry and sand it lightly with fine sandpaper before applying the second. After second coat dries, sand it lightly, too, in order not to have such a high gloss.

If the wood of the bed is not dark enough to go with the chifforobe, it will be necessary to use a stain plus the clear varnish, or else a varnish stain. The latter would be simpler and probably quite satisfactory in this case. You should be able to get a card showing different stains from a paint store to take out to your house in order to decide which will go best with the chifforobe.

Our house is an old one with floors made of one layer of thick planks. These planks give trouble with swelling and shrinking. They are tight in the summer time, but when the artificial heat is turned on, wide cracks develop between the boards, making the floors drafty and dirty. Do you have any suggestions for filling these cracks this fall to make the house more livable in the winter? R. T. B.

One method of closing such cracks is with strips of hardwood running the full depth of the crack. The strips should be cut to fit snugly and secured by nailing or glueing. Another method is to use sawdust, preferably of the same type of wood as the floor. This can be made into a paste with a little glue and pressed into the crack, filling it to the top. Dry sawdust is then pressed on to take up any exposed glue and for a finish. When dry, the cracks are sandpapered smooth.

SOMETHING NEW for party refreshments are individual frosted sandwich loaves. Covered with cream cheese, they're served like French pastries. The separate layers which make up the tiny loaves may feature any desired fillings. But a good combination is olive pimiento cheese spread for one layer of bread, and fresh ripe tomatoes and mayonnaise for another. Here are directions:

12 slices day-old bread
1 5-oz. glass olive pimiento cheese spread
Mayonnaise
Tomatoes
3 3-oz. packages cream cheese
Milk
Watercress

Trim the crusts from the bread and cut each slice in half lengthwise. For each individual sandwich loaf, cover one strip of bread with the cheese spread and place on it another strip of bread spread with mayonnaise. Add a slice of peeled tomato, and cover with a third strip of bread spread with mayonnaise. Slightly soften the cream cheese with milk and frost each individual sandwich loaf with it. Arrange them on chop plate and garnish with watercress

Glass Containers

Glass containers are not only attractive containers of household supplies but they are practical in that at a glance one can see just what needs replenishing. With tin containers one would not always open the can to see its contents, but there can be no slip-up in a glass container.

Copperware

Fill the copper kettles with boiling water and rinse thoroughly before starting to clean them. They will polish much more quickly.

Very Soiled

When the windows of the porch are very dirty and perhaps splashed with mud, rub them off first with a dampened newspaper and then clean as usual. You will find it easier on both windows and you.

In Bridal Procession

Saint Matthews Cathedral was the scene of the wedding August 7 of Miss Marjorie Ann Smythe, daugter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Burwell Smythe of Holton, Kan., and Paul Revere Michael Donelan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Donelan of Boston, Mass. The Rev. William Joseph Awalt officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown and her finger-tip veil of illusion was held by a tiara of orange blossoms. She carried a white prayerbook topped with a white orchid and stephanotis.

Miss Barbara Curtice attended the bride as maid of honor and John Francis Donelan served his brother as best man. The ushers were Philip DiTomaso, Robert Flenner and Eugene Cook.

Following the reception at the Army and Navy Town Club, the couple left for a short wedding trip. On their return they will reside in Arlington, Va.

The bride was graduated from

Anderson—Glover

The chapel of National Presbyterian Church was scene of the wedding August 7 of Miss Alice Louise Glover, daughter of Mrs. John Milligan Glover of this city, and Harry C. Anderson of Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Thomas A. Stone officiated.

The bride's brother-in-law, James J. Hunter of Chicago gave her in marriage.

The bride attended Maret French School, the Madeira School and Bryn Mawr College.

Eternal 'Why' of Childhood Has Limits

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is understandable that a mother would feel a sense of pride when she proclaims that she conscientiously answers all of her children's questions.

Admitted that this is an admirable stand to take, there are limits to it, and the mother should be aware of them.

Any child who discovers that his mother answers all of his questions, is apt to take advantage of this in order to keep a conversation alive. As long as he asks questions he is assured of an audience.

It is obvious that he might slow up his acquiescence to her requests by asking, "Why do I have to do that?" He should develop some faith in the justice of his parent's demands. She will be constantly challenged to justify them if she conscientiously answers such queries?

No child needs to be told each and every day why he has to go to bed, why he has to take a bath, why he is expected to eat at regular hours. If unusual events crop up, these may demand an explanation, but the ordinary routine of the day should not need one, it is developed in the child's best interests and he should take that for granted.

Children are entitled to answers to questions which seek information. The eternal "why" of childhood is a learning device. They ask because they want to know and they are entitled to an answer.

But, this is different from trying to find logical answers to carping questions. No parent could be expected to answer such a question as, "Why are you so mean to me?" Any answer would imply that "I am mean to you: because." That puts her in an impossible position.

It is sensible to recognize that when a child asks senseless questions, what he needs is company, and some bright conversation on any subject would fulfill that need.

When he avoids work by harassing the mother with questions let her turn the answer back to him. If he can't seem to understand why a task has to be performed, let him strive to think up arguments in defense of the mother's position, and he will learn more than from any answer she could give him.

Knowing when a question merits a conscientious answer is then fully as vital a consideration as endeavoring to find an answer to it.

Machines and Typewriters

Keep the sewing machines and typewriters covered when not in use. If exposed to dust they soon get out of repair, besides requiring a good cleaning before each use.

Hold That Color

When cooking spinach, kale, string beans or peas, put a lettuce leaf in with the vegetables. It will help the vegetables retain their color.

Summertime Hints on Hair Grooming

Woman's crowning glory usually looks its worst in the hot summer months. But there is no excuse for wispy hair when a few beauty precautions will keep hair lovely, even in August.

Keep your hair immaculate between shampoos. Perspiration may dry, but its odor doesn't disappear. Use a mildly astringent special preparation that cleanses and removes loose dandruff, applying with a bit of cotton to scalp and hair. Massage with a soft, lintless towel, then brush hair dry.

If you are going to the seashore, tuck into your beach bag a bottle of nonsticky suntan oil that not only gives you a flattering, rich amber tan, but masks your hair, too, against fading, drying or streaking in the sun.

Heads Buxton, Inc.

Lady Tycoon Still on Job At Age of 86

By Cynthia Lowry
Associated Press Newsfeatures

NEW YORK.—Sprightly, poised and 86 years old, Mrs. Dana Buxton is celebrating her golden anniversary this year as an active business woman. In the past 50 years she has seen her little sideline souvenir business become an internationally known manufacturing firm of small leather goods. She is treasurer of the firm (she stepped aside as president only a few years ago) and is a member of the board of directors. She'll never retire, this New England housewife, because Buxton, Inc., "is a part of me."

MRS. DANA BUXTON . . .
It all started in her kitchen

How did a 38-year-old Springfield, Mass., wife and mother of six happen to launch such a business? She said with composure, during a recent New York visit:

Wanted to Help

"We had a large family, and my husband didn't make enough money. I wanted to help out."

Mr. Buxton was a salesman of novelties—fancy ashtrays, favors, souvenirs and such which were popular before the turn of the century.

"The girls—there were five of them—had taken art in high school," Mrs. Buxton continued, "and we had a pyrographic set. That was a needle and heating attachment used to burn writing on wood or leather.

"I decided that sheepskin, the cheapest kind of leather, was about the color of souvenir postcards. We bought some, cut the leather into squares with vegetable knives, and the girls used the pyrographic set to draw pictures of Indian heads and write town names on them. Mr. Buxton used to carry our line of novelties in a separate part of his suitcase."

The business was started from the Buxton home. Soon it grew so that the family had to move to a house with a large cellar where the shop was set up.

Key Containers Made

"Gradually we got into making key-containers and wallets," Mrs. Buxton continued. "The key-containers started because Mr. Buxton had so many holes in his pockets and always blamed them on his keys. I didn't like to be mending pockets all the time, so we worked out the container which would hold the keys and protect pockets."

The children were Mrs. Buxton's first aides, and gradually the neighborhood children were brought in to assist in the growing business. A couple of years later, when they were going to start making wallets, the Buxtons bought their first leather tools and hired leather craftsmen. Still Mrs. Buxton supervised the actual manufacture. Mr. Buxton gave up his jobber's position and devoted himself to sales.

Buxton, Inc., kept on growing. Today it does a multimillion-dollar annual business, employs hundreds of people. But the spirit of Mrs. Buxton is still strong in the place. She is in the plant frequently, knows names and faces of employees. Her only difficulty is a slight deafness, coupled with extreme reluctance to wear her hearing aid.

Dana Buxton died a number of years ago—on the eve of the First World War.

"The morning after the funeral," said her daughter, Miss Julia Buxton, "mother slipped into father's office chair, and business went on as usual."

The Polite Thing to Do

We are often sent good things to eat in jars, dishes or glasses, which we entirely forget after the good things are eaten and in consequence they are never returned. It is a good idea to write the sender's name on a slip of paper and tuck in inside the container. Then it wil stand some chance of being returned, and soon.

Pupil Goes 1734 Miles For Lesson

By Edward S. Kitch

CHICAGO.—Each week Mildred Andrews, of Norman, Okla., travels 1,734 miles to Chicago and back for a music lesson.

Miss Andrews, concert organist, is studying for five weeks under Marcel Dupre, who is in Chicago. Dupre is considered one of the world's most renowned Bach players. He holds a post at St. Sulpice Cathedral in Paris, France. Conducting a series of summer concerts at Rockefeller Memorial Chapel on the University of Chicago campus, he gives instruction to accomplished students of the pipe organ.

His student from Oklahoma is chairman of the organ department of the University of Oklahoma. Miss Andrews is conducting a full teaching schedule in musical arts in the university's summer session.

With timetables in one hand and books of music in the other, she boards the Texas Chief, Santa Fe streamliner, at 5:58 p. m. Tuesday. After a night's sleep, she arrives in Chicago at 9 a. m. Wednesday.

Her one-hour lesson with Dupre begins at 2:30 p. m. She leaves Chicago on the same train at 6 p. m. Arriving in Norman, Okla., at 9:23 a. m. Thursday, she is in time for a 10 o'clock morning class she instructs in music.

During the concert season, Miss Andrews will add another 15,000 miles to her yearly travel log. She visits New York City, Washington, D. C., points in the Midwest, and Denver, Colo.

Stay Out of It

Don't be the sort of mother who goes out front and acts as a referee every time your child gets into an argument with another child in the neighborhood. Let her figure out some of the answers for herself or you will soon be disliked by her friends and they will feel she is a poor sport.

In the Bathroom

It is well to put washing soda down the drain of the basin in the bathroom every so often, just as you do your kitchen sink. The residue from men shaving is frequently the cause of a stopped-up drain in this room and the soda will do much toward preventing stoppage.

MARK TRAIL

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Smokers Ply Our Bill With Free Advice

Before setting off on my vacation last month, I complained that my wife is forever finding and smoking the reserve packs of cigarettes which I try to hide from her.

District Liners lost no time in giving me a lot of sound advice. S. Rose of 3300 24th st. ne. maintains that "the solution is simple. Just quit smoking."

Haskell C. Jacobs of 4317 N. 2d rd., Arlington, Va., optimistically suggests: "Convince your wife to quit smoking." (Editor's note: Hah!)

District Liner Jacobs adds that if this doesn't work, "increase her allowance so that she can afford to buy her own." (Editor's note: This is apparently meant to infer that there is actually a point at which a wife's allowance becomes adequate. An interesting theory!)

James H. Letcher, jr., of 501 Transportation Bldg., has a more practical proposal. He says: "Do you have a sock that needs darning? Hide your spare cigarettes in it. They'll be safe for weeks."

Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., thinks the best solution is Arthur Godfrey's suggestion: "Buy them by the carton." But that's just procrastinating, and in this space we face issues squarely.

Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne., thinks he's helping us in our endeavor to be realistic when he points out that it's impossible to hide things in an apartment, so therefore I should move to a house—complete with attic and cellar.

If Jim will furnish the house, I'll be glad to move in. I'd even be willing to make payments—monthly, or weekly—and if the printers correct the spelling of "weakly" they're going to hear from me.

One of the more practical ideas to emerge from the mailbag comes from Irma Rebman of 9 Barnacle Green sw.

Irma says that a bit of scotch tape is an excellent way to fasten a pack of cigarettes to the underside of a table or chest—and who would think of looking there?

Perhaps the most pathetic story in this lot comes from Fred M. Sullivan of 1401 I st. nw.

Fred is a bachelor, so he just puts aside a pack for a rainy day and when the rainy day comes, there are his smokes, undisturbed.

So he puffs his cigarettes contentedly and everything is just peachy until the next rainy day rolls around and he discovers that he failed to replace his emergency rations.

"You can at least squawk to your wife," he mourns. "But who can I blame?"

MISCELLANY

Have you seen the new supermarket grocery carts with a specially designed seat for children? . . . Ward A. Sandusky of 5618 Southwick st., Bethesda, Md., recently came across a Washington Post carrier receipt for the month of November, 1905. A. P. Rider of 933 N st. nw. was the agent, and he acknowledged receipt of 70 cents to pay for daily and Sunday papers for one month. In 43 years the price has almost doubled—but look what's happened to everything else meantime . . . Besides, The Post is more than twice as good now . . . Did you know that Washington is supposed to be the world's leading user of air-conditioning? Small wonder. There may be places along the equator that need refrigeration as much as we do, but they're not as populous . . . One of the first letters I opened when I got back to Washington was one more version of the song, "I Had But Fifty Cents," this one from Mrs. James F. Burke of 3411 24th st. ne. . . . And another was a letter from Bill Mathers of 1326 Euclid st. nw. observing: "Either Zlotnick has finally cleaned his big 'white' bear and gotten it white again, or it's all this rain we've been having."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Six pups, one month old, assorted sexes and patterns." (Sligo 9554).

Did you know that it is estimated that Washington now has almost 16,000 television receivers in operation?

Some of them must be in private homes. We don't have that many saloons.

NEW YORK.—Senator Barkley plans to fly to Italy for a 3-day business trip. He is the head of an American delegation to a parliamentary conferen and—before he ever thought of becoming the vice presidential nominee—had arranged to make the trip by slow boat. He'll fly roundtrip, and be back in time to start campaigning.

Even if the musicians union relents in its wage demands, it's too late for the '48 opera season. The Met may have a short season in January and February.

Mrs. Robert Magidoff, the Russian-born lady whose husband was ousted from the Soviet Union, will teach Russian at the University of Louisville.

Bernard Baruch, who will be 78 on August 19, just returned from a fishing trip in Canada. His host was Colonel Clark, Winston Churchill's Florida host. The Chicago printers' strike is expected to be settled shortly.

Hermann Oelrichs, the New York and Newport society leader who died last week, gave an annual Christmas party which was attended by the foremost citizens of the town. Some of the guests insisted that Mr. Oelrichs was so busy attending to party-details that he was unable to notice anything about the guests. Monty Woolley once decided to test this. He gilded his beard, went to the party, and almost stabbed the host with his gilded beard—but Oelrichs made no mention of it, and asked perfunctorily: "Drink?" . . . "Yes, Scotch," said Woolley, angrily, and then he shouted: "Hermann, don't you notice anything unusual?" . . . "Yes. You've gilded your beard," replied Oelrichs, calmly pouring the Scotch. "Do you take soda—or plain water?"

'Cannonism' Returns to House

By Drew Pearson

Uncle Joe Cannon of Danville, Ill., long-time GOP Speaker of the House of Representatives, was famous for two things: The straightest and longest aim of any tobacco chewer in Congress, and the iron-handed dictatorship that he imposed on the House of Representatives for a quarter of a century.

Rep. Martin

Eventually, a coalition of Democrats and progressive Republicans rebelled against Uncle Joe and the days of Cannonism were supposed to have ended.

One week ago today, however, Cannonism was back in the House of Representatives in all its short-sighted, mail-fisted glory.

This time it probably should have been called Martinism; for Speaker Joe Martin, who, underneath his genial, easygoing smile, can be a tough and ruthless parliamentary dictator, was wielding the gavel. And he refused to permit more than 20 minutes of debate for each side on a question affecting Government credit and the savings of millions of people.

In the closing rush of Congress, the incident escaped much public attention. But it was one of the most significant things happening in the two years of the Eightieth Congress.

Unexpectedly, the House Banking and Currency Committee ' d inserted a provision in the anti-inflation bill increasing the gold certificate requirement of Federal Reserve banks from 25 to 40 per cent. This was something that Wall Street had been lobbying for ever since the war.

What Wall Street has in mind, according to the Treasury Department, is to depreciate the value of Government bonds—now at par or above—after which the banks and insurance companies could buy them in again at lower prices and make a killing.

Bond Debacle of First War

This is what happened after World War I. At that time a wave of Government bond selling sent Liberty bonds down to $80, despite the fact that interest rates were higher. Small bondholders, worried over the price drop, sold out wholesale, after which the insurance companies, banks and big estates bought them in.

Ever since World War II, the Federal Reserve Board has kept the price of Government bonds high by buying them in as fast as they were offered for sale.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder had opposed this provision in the bill. Federal Reserve Chairman Tom McCabe had also opposed it.

Martin's Gag Rule

Yet despite this advice, and the fact this provision might have started a run on the bond market and shaken United States Government credit, Speaker Joe Martin insisted on a gag rule and limited debate.

At one time Democratic Leader John McCormack of Boston, Mass., rose to ask for an extension of time because of the importance of the subject. But Martin refused even to recognize him.

Not only was debate from the floor limited, but no amendments from the floor were permitted. It was a travesty on the so-called parliamentary system.

But during that same afternoon, the Republicans consumed hours of time making political speeches for publication in the Congressional Record and to be mailed back to the voters.

Thus ended one of the most shameful sessions of undemocratic debate in the recent history of Congress. Fortunately, Republican leaders in the Senate were wiser. Uninfluenced by the Wall Street lobby, they cut out the House provision raising the gold reserves for Federal Reserve banks.

Steel to Sweden

The House Small Business Committee has protested to the Commerce Department against heavy shipments of steel to Sweden. Sweden is already producing more steel than she can use, is shipping the surplus behind the Iron Curtain. Yet the United States is exporting more steel to Sweden than any other country.

The Small Business Committee believes some of it also comes back to the United States and is sold on the black market. Meanwhile, American manufacturers are so short of steel that they cannot fill all their military orders.

Capital Chaff

Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson has cracked down on the railroads in their demand for an increase in mail rates. When the Postoffice Department asked the railroads to file several forms to justify a demand for a 70 per cent increase in mail-carrying charges, the railroads did not fill out the forms. So last week Donaldson abruptly canceled a 25 per cent increase he had given them. The Government, he said, was still more important than the railroads.
